When they coined the phrase "stubborn as a mule," they had this beast in mind as Eric Kasel finds out during the mule packing contest Thursday afternoon at the Twin Falls County Fair

Mules earn their ill-tempered reputations

By MARTY TRILLHAASE and GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writers

FILER — Few farm animals have a more maligned reputation than the mule.

And for many, the characterization of a mule as a stubborn and ill-tempered beast with a nasty tendency to kick the daylights out of unwary humans is an accurate one.

But such views bring a smile from Leon Littlefield of Hansen. Littlefield owns the Jackass Flats Ranch and his mules, Gladys and Maude, took grand champion and reserve champion honors Thursday in the model mule competition.

Littlefield's efforts also were prominent in other events during Thursday's session of the 1981 Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

Working with Sparky Zebarth of Twin Falls, Littlefield managed a third-place [illegible]st M[illegible] Pack scran[illegible]ers in th[illegible] event were [illegible] Littlefield and Ray Atkinson, first place; and Bob and Bill Barton of Jarbidge, Nev., second place.

In this event, riders must capture their mules, saddle them, pack them with two bales of straw and lead the cantankerous animals through a series of paces in the rodeo arena. It was by no means an easy task, as several of the mules, including one [illegible] by the senior Littlefield [illegible]ently protested and nearly kicked one of the participants.

"Some of them are stubborn," he admits. "But there's usually a good reason. They're just a little more cautious. They avoid stumbling into some kind of catastrophe. They'll save your life.

"Some people will call that stubborn," he said with a shrug.

"Look and see how many of these mules have cuts on their legs from sticking them into barbed wire fences, then look at the horses."

Littlefield confided one of the secrets of working with mules.

"They require a great deal more patience," he said. "If you get in a hurry, don't let the mule know it."

The real source of the Jackass Flats' mule dynasty was standing behind Littlefield, Rasputan, a little jack whose gentle eyes conceal a heart of lust.

"You know your history?" asked Littlefield nodding at the little jackass that sired all his mules. "He has the same libido as the other Rasputin. We named him mostly for his love life."

But in the final analysis, what about that infamous kick that brought indignity — or worse — to many a man in American folklore and films?

"They kick," Littlefield says, sim-

Conservatives nudge Fisher into 1982 gubernatorial race

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

KUNA — A new curve waits in the road for candidates in the 1982 race to the governor's office.

Kuna farmer Bernard Fisher, who's been testing the water with some quiet campaigning around the state, says he plans to jump into the Republican gubernatorial contest formally "in the very near future."

"A lot of people want me to run," Fisher said in an interview with the Times-News Thursday. "I don't know how we can turn it down."

Republican candidates already seeking the state's top office are Lt. Gov. Philip Batt of Wilder and House Speaker Ralph Olmstead of Twin Falls. Gov. John Evans appears to have an uncontested shot at the Democrat nomination.

"There's no doubt we're a late starter," said Fisher's chief supporter, state Rep. Gene Winchester, R-Kuna. "We were waiting for a conservative candidate, like Vern Ravenscroft or Allan Larsen (both former governor candidates), but none has appeared.

"No matter how Olmstead or Batt cuddle up to conservatives in Idaho, their voting records on abortion, drafting women, the equal-rights amendment or even on taxes are simply not very conservative," Winchester said. "There's room on the right for an alternative candidate."

A retired Air Force colonel, Fisher, 54, received the Congressional Medal of Honor for saving a fellow pilot who crashed on a runway under seige in Vietnam. Most of his administrative experience comes from the Air Force, where he served as a squadron commander and later as Idaho's adviser to the Air National Guard.

"I'm kind of new to politics, and I'm certainly a new face," Fisher said, "but I believe very strongly in my chances (for election). I believe in less government, with a little more concern for the people, and by that, I'm referring to things the people have shown they want, like the 1-percent initiative, which ended up being terribly watered down."

Fisher said having Democratic governors the last 12 years has resulted in too many "good bills being passed by the majority only to be vetoed and shot down the drain.

"You take the views of the Republicans and Democrats or the conservatives and the liberals, they really don't concern the people that much," Fisher said.

"What the people want is more representation in state government. They're not getting what they want from government because of this dissension of views."

Fisher has waited until now before committing himself to the race so he had time to organize a campaign team and gather financial backing.

"I feel bad about having to use so much money for a campaign like this," Fisher said. "We talk about being conservative in our thinking and then end up having to spend so much money in order to get elected. I hope that we can run our campaign on the smallest amount possible."

He said he probably would announce his candidacy officially within 30 days.

Born in Utah, Fisher first moved to Idaho with his parents while he was in high school. He and his wife, Realla, have six sons.

"Bernie has been in Idaho long enough to know the needs of the state," Winchester said. "He isn't going after the position for the ego boost; he gets enough of that with his medal. He simply is concerned about the problems we face and in helping the people."

Winchester claimed Fisher received significant support while testing his campaign for governor in Blackfoot, Boise, Pocatello and several north Idaho communties.

"We'll begin campaigning in earnest this month," Winchester said.

Riders lead parking lot round-up

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

BOB DELASHMUTT/Times-News

Parking lot rider Les Charlton leads his charge

FILER — Out of a cloud of dust he rides, to head 'em up and move 'em out.

The Lone Parking Attendant rides again!

Les Charlton, a Twin Falls Lions Club member, is one of several volunteers who direct traffic on horseback in the country fair parking lot.

Riding on his faithful horse, Kimo (Sabe has to wait back by the horse trailer) Charlton keeps track of empty parking spaces and directs cars with his red flag.

A Lion for nearly two years, he sports both a Lion's pin and a potato pin on his vest.

The Lions Club and the Twin Falls Sheriff's Posse have assisted in parking cars for years. With thousands of persons visiting the fair every day, volunteers are essential to maintaining order among the automobiles.

Volunteers work in five- to six-hour shifts to round up incoming cars and head them into the empty spaces. Lions Club members say fairgoers look for their bright yellow vests and red flags.

The owner of C & H Building and Construction in Twin Falls, Charlton borrowed two horses from his father-in-law for his parking-lot stint. Oddly enough, he says, Sabe is in love with Kimo, and winnies at him anxiously when he gallops away.

It takes a while for skittish Kimo to get used to being surrounded by cars. Charlton also has to contend with some kids who "like to pop balloons behind you and throw popcorn." But in general, drivers are pleasant and cooperative.

On the other side of the fair, Sharon Dickerson rides the parking-lot trail to keep law and order in the spaces reserved for horse showers and livestock owners. Her husband is a member of the Twin Falls Sheriff's Posse, and between them they spend 10 hours on horseback parking cars.

Riding horses saves walking — at least for the riders — and makes for a better view of the lot, she explains.

And so it's, "Hi ho Kimo, away," as the Lone Parking Attendant is off on the trail of another empty space.

O'Connor fields steady questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite persistent questioning, Sandra Day O'Connor finished two days of Senate confirmation hearings Thursday with every prospect of becoming the first woman to sit on the Supreme Court.

Members of the Senate Judiciary Committee heaped praise on the Arizona appeals court judge after their often intense interrogation failed to raise any major stumbling blocks to her confirmation.

Unless interest groups opposed to her positions on social issues — which are scheduled to testify today on her nomination — find new issues on her fitness, Mrs. O'Connor appeared to have cinched easy Senate approval.

Speaking on crime, she said there has been a "general breakdown" of society's standards on moral behavior.

Although she said she has no solutions, she expressed the view that a mobile society with its lack of family and neighborhood ties contribute to an unacceptably high crime rate.

Under questioning from Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. she conceded she still agrees with her 1970 vote that opposed a move to strip the Supreme Court of its right to review such issues as abortion.

Despite repeated attempts to zero in on her abortion views, Mrs. O'Connor evaded any outright declarations of her legal position on the inflammatory subject. She said she would not have an abortion herself, but approves of the procedure if needed to save a mother's life.

Earlier, one of her sharpest critics, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., asked her where she would draw the line on allowing abortion.

Mrs. O'Connor said legislators should decide when to ban abortions.

Would she prohibit abortion even if it meant "saving the life of the mother?" asked Denton, a conservative New Right senator staunchly opposed to abortion for any reason.

"No, I would not," Mrs. O'Connor replied.

However, she reaffirmed that abortion "remains offensive to me at all levels."

Responding to series of questions on her fitness to join the nation's highest court, Mrs. O'Connor steered a careful course. She firmly refused to reveal how she would vote on issues coming before the court.

She assured the senators President Reagan did not require her to commit herself to how she would rule on specific cases.

"I was not asked to make any commitments about what I would do or how I would resolve any issue that would come before the court," she told Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Friday briefing

Fire destroys Fairfield home

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County Sheriff's Office was investigating a forest fire that destroyed a summer home north of Fairfield Tuesday night, and U.S. Forest Service firefighters responded Thursday night to a one-acre fire in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

Sawtooth Forest dispatcher Len Miracle said eight firefighters were sent Thursday at about 3 p.m. to a fire, apparently started by lightning, near Pole Creek in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The one-acre fire did not appear to be spreading, Miracle said.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden said fire crews responded at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday to a blaze on private and national forest land near Little Smoky Creek, 17 miles northwest of Fairfield.

The fire was reported by personnel at the Big Smoky Guard Station, who spotted flames coming from a propane tank, Madden said. One summer home was lost in the blaze.

Air Force jet recovered

A board of Air Force officers will examine the wreckage of the twin-engine Talon jet, Thunderbird No. 1, in an attempt to find out what caused it to crash on takeoff Tuesday and skid into Lake Erie.

Both the pilot, Thunderbirds commander Lt. Col. David L. Smith, and his crew chief, Staff Sgt. Dwight Roberts, were able to eject from the crippled jet.

Brutality indictments dropped

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday threw out brutality indictments against six city detectives and a former police officer accused of beating and intimidating witnesses, saying government lawyers coerced the grand jury into returning indictments.

"We are convinced that the defendants have been denied their constitutional rights not to be brought to trial except after a valid indictment," said U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier in the 16-page decision.

Wilder teachers back on job

WILDER (UPI) — Wilder teachers returned to work Thursday after striking Wednesday over salaries, benefits and grievance procedures wages, officials said.

Union and school representatives said the strike was called off when negotiators agreed to return to the bargaining table after hearing complaints from about 120 district patrons. Both sides said Thursday they were confident an agreement could be reached soon.

Larry Isom, board spokesman, said the teachers Wednesday night were offered an 8 percent salary increase and full family medical insurance, plus other items that had been contested.

Judge questions Franklin jury

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Judge Jay Banks halted testimony in the first-degree-murder trial of avowed racist Joseph Paul Franklin Thursday while he questioned jurors to see if they had read recent news accounts about the case.

The questions came a day after the mayor of Fort Wayne, Ind., said the FBI had told him Franklin was the prime suspect in the sniper-wounding of National Urban League President Vernon Jordan.

Banks cautioned jurors that news stories "tend to editorialize." He warned the 12-member panel not to read or listen to any stories about the proceedings and told them to confine their attention to evidence presented in court.

Searchers give up on escapees

AURORA, Mo. (UPI) — Frustrated, weary law officers Thursday called off a two-day manhunt in the Ozark thickets of southwest Missouri for three convicts authorities said were "desperate enough to do anything."

Lawrence County Sheriff David Tatum said although he privately feared the fugitives might still be "holed up somewhere," officers had exhausted every lead.

Daredevil lands on skyscraper

NEW YORK (UPI) — A daredevil parachutist out for "the sport of it" dropped safely from the skies Thursday to the roof of the 110-story World Trade Center a quarter of a mile above the ground.

The latest feat of derring-do involving the soaring twin-towered skyscraper passed almost unnoticed by busy New Yorkers in the streets below.

However, about 20 tourists on the observation roof of the south tower were jolted when the chutist, John Carta, 35, wafted down in a white suit to join them.

Olmstead supports tax cut

BOISE (UPI) — House Speaker Ralph Olmstead said Thursday he will promote a Reagan-style tax-cut plan for Idaho during the 1982 legislative session.

Olmstead, Twin Falls, a Republican candidate for governor, said his program would be patterned after the Reagan tax package and would be aimed at giving incentives to businesses and providing relief for property taxpayers.

Generally outlining his proposals to the Idaho Press Club, Olmstead said he would push bills to provide investment tax credits for businesses and an accelerated depreciation schedule for property taxes.

Solidarity ends congress

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — The first half of Solidarity's national congress ended Thursday by giving union chief Lech Walesa a mandate for a "dictatorship" to strengthen the federation and challenging Communist rule with a call for free national elections.

Rioting erupted Thursday night in the central manufacturing city of Konin, triggered by street fighting between gypsies and local youths, the official news agency PAP reported.

Chicago bishop under investigation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal prosecutors said Thursday they are investigating charges Cardinal John P. Cody, head of the nation's biggest Catholic diocese, illegally diverted church funds to enrich a woman he describes as his cousin.

Church spokesmen "categorically" denied any wrongdoing.

The Chicago Sun-Times, in a copyright story, said Cody, 73, may have diverted as much as $1 million in tax-exempt church funds to enrich Helen Dolan Wilson, 74, a childhood friend and longtime confidante who has been described at various times as Cody's sister, niece and cousin.

Mrs. Wilson, who is not a blood relation to the Cardinal, said the allegations are nothing more than a "vicious joke." Cody was unavailable for comment.

Among other things, the newspaper said, Cody financed a $100,000 vacation home for Mrs. Wilson in Florida.

The newspaper said a federal grand jury last January subpoenaed both Cody's and Mrs. Wilson's personal records and the records of the archdiocese.

"The church categorically denies there has been any misuse of church funds," the Rev. Monsignor Francis A. Brackin, vicar general, said. He also accused the newpaper of harboring an "anti-Catholic bias."

In a statement released later in the day, Brackin said Cody is "deeply saddened by the charges against him, the church and his own family."

"He has never violated the trust that dedicated Catholic priests, religious and lay people, as well as many in other religious communities, have placed in him," Brackin said.

"Allegations that he has misused church funds are wrong and misguided. Innuendoes about dear members of his family are erroneous and tragically painful."

Jeremy Margolis, an assistant U.S. attorney, confirmed an investigation was under way.

"We acknowledge this office has received allegations of improper diversion of church funds by Cardinal John P. Cody," Margolis said. "As to all cases referred to this office, we have the responsibility of determining the accuracy of those allegations and whether any federal laws have been violated."

He did not say when the allegations were first made or who made them.

Mrs. Wilson, divorced in 1935, said "God no," when asked if the story were true-but she neither confirmed nor denied that Cody bought her a Florida home.

"I think it's a vicious joke," she said in an interview with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Wilson also disputed a Sun-Times statement that she and Cody were not related. The Sun-Times said Mrs. Wilson's mother died in 1912 and her father married Cody's aunt a year later.

ply. "They're a great deal more accurate than horses. If a mule kicks at you and misses, it's because he didn't want to hit you. He was just warning you."

Looking at his boots and laughing, Littlefield admitts he's been on the receiving end more than once. But his mules apparently have a soft spot for their owner.

"I'm still alive."

In the exotic-breeds competition, Susan Munsee placed first with a simmento, Scot Tverdy of Buhl won second place with a hereford-lemosin, Mark Tverdy of Castleford placed third with a simmental-hereford, Gus Kohntopp of Buhl won fourth place with a simmenta cross and Chad Smith of Filer captured fifth place with a simmental-hereford-angus.

Thursday marked Twin Falls Day at the fair, with many local offices and businesses closed to allow employees to attend the fair.

Today is West End Day, with many offices and businesses in Filer, Buhl and Castleford anctipated to close in observance of the event.

Thursday marked the climax for many youngsters who prepared demonstrations as part of their 4-H projects.

And the nervous butterflies-in-the-stomach syndrome was apparent with some of the young participants.

Outside the pavilion building, Tammy Scott and Liz Allard demonstrated the finer points of goat fitting and showing as a team entry. Seconds after answering the final questions from the audience, the two girls led their goats away under the trees, glanced at each other and said, "whew!"

Their poise and demonstration of knowledge before a crowd of 25 people won them a blue ribbon in the intermediate division of 4-H agriculture demonstrations.

Myrna Kastner, extension home economist, explained that the demonstration competition gives the 4-H'ers an opportunity to develop leadership and the ability to carry things through from the beginning to the end. But the biggest learning experience comes from facing a crowd of people and explaining something clearly.

Ned Quigley won the trophy in the junior division for his demonstration, "Dead or Alive," on calf care. Ryan Slack, also from that division, won a blue ribbon and will go on to district competition.

In the 4-H home economics demonstration competition, trophies were won by Kim Murphy, 16, of Twin Falls, for her presentation, "Stories for Young Children," and by Christine Rathburn, 12, of Twin Falls, for her discussion of sewing tips, "Get the Point."

Trophy winners in the 4-H miscellaneous demonstration competition were: Gail Hazen, 8, of Twin Falls, for her talk on lawn mower safety; Maureen Evans, 11, of Twin Falls, for her discussion on the treatment of parvo virus; Rhonda Kistler, 15, of Twin Falls, for a demonstration on dog training; and Sherry Stalley, 15, and Mike Floyd, 15, both of Twin Falls, for their presentation on gourmet cooking for dogs.

Nancy Nass, 16, of Twin Falls, won all five first-place awards in the Suffolk class, adding on to her record of winning all but one such competition in the past three years.

Nass didn't profess to be surprised, saying she doesn't rely on any secret formula for success.

"We just have good sheep," she said.

In the Southdown breed, Julie Edwards of Filer won first place in the ewe and ewe lamb categories. Chris Lewis, 13, of Filer, won first place in the ewe lamb, ewe and lamb and ram lamb categories. John Armga won first place in the working ewe category.

In cross-breeds lamb competition, victories were shared by Jeff Sharp of Filer, who placed first in ewe and lamb, and Mike Ruffing, who won in the ewe lamb, yearling ewe, working ewe and ram lamb contests.

Rob Champlin of Twin Falls benefited by being the sole entrant in the FFA sheeping breeding competition, capturing first-place ribbons in the ram, over one year; ewe, one year and over; ewe lamb; two breeding ewes; and the flock categories.

Buhl agriculture teacher Andy Wiseman, who supervised the FFA competition, said he was disappointed by the low turnout.

"I think it's not encouraged that much, and it does take an awful lot of work to it," he said.

Grassley said it was vital to be sure that Mrs. O'Connor would not turn out to be "as great a surprise" to Reagan as former Chief Justice Earl Warren was to former President Dwight Eisenhower.

Responding to questions, Mrs. O'Connor testified on:

• Women in military combat: She opposes women being shot at on a battlefield but said "pushing a button" behind the lines would be different.

• Forced busing: She had as an Arizona legislator voted for a proposal urging federal officials to end forced busing in desegregation cases. "I just don't think it's a system that's very beneficial to the child."

• Television in courtrooms: She had not excluded cameras from her trial court and felt it had worked well.

• Open courtrooms: While pretrial publicity may jeopardize the right of a fair trial, courtroom doors should be left open to the media as much as possible since there are other alternatives such as changing the location of the trial.

• Prior restraint of publication of information the government believes would jeopardize national security: The government has a heavy burden to prove there is clear and present danger to national security before the information can be suppressed.

• The Miranda warning against self-incrimination: Its use has not resulted "in the inability of police to be reasonably successful in obtaining information and securing statements (from suspects)."

• Rules excluding certain evidence from trial: It has had great impact on drug-related crime in Arizona and "there are times when perfectly relevant evidence — sometimes the only evidence — has been excluded."

The front produced no appreciable rain, however, as only traces were reported from the central mountains and southeastern Idaho.

Northwesterly winds of 15 to 18 mph were reported across Idaho as temperatures cooled into the 70s. The warmest reading in the state was 97 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley's 30 and Elk City's 31 were the coolest morning lows.

In the Magic Valley, the need for irrigation water will be a little above normal through Tuesday. Conditions for harvesting operations, other outside farm work and hay drying will be generally good through the first of the week.

Pan evaporation is forecast at .28 inch today and Saturday. Winds will be 5 to 12 mph today, creating fair to good spraying conditions.

The extended forecast calls for little change through Tuesday with temperatures near to slightly above normal. Highs will range from 75 to 85 degrees and lows will be from 45 to 55.

Mine blast kills three in northern Idaho

RIGGINS (UPI) — Two hundred pounds of dynamite exploded in a gold mine in an apparent accident that killed three miners and injured a fourth, authorities said Thursday.

About 20 rescuers wearing oxygen masks entered the 400-foot mine shaft in the mountainous area of North-Central Idaho Thursday, pulling out the bodies of Artie Johnson, 50, Glen Bedard, 22, and Morgan Owen, 20.

Sheriff Robert "Bud" Walkup said Rocky Wilson, 33, was hospitalized for treatment for inhalation of the toxic gas.

"I don't see at this time any signs of negligence" by the mine operator, the Havlah Group, said Bud Trussell, supervising mining engineer with the Mine Safety and Health Administration field office in Boise.

"It's probably just one of these things where somebody made a mistake," he said.

Trussell said a preliminary investigation by three federal officials at the scene indicated either Owen or Bedard probably had touched off the explosives accidentally.

Walkup said officials believed Owen was near the dynamite — at the base of the horizontal shaft in the side of Marshall Mountain 38 miles east of Riggins — when the explosion occurred late Wednesday.

He said Owen probably was killed in the explosion while Bedard was overcome by the carbon monoxide. Both men worked for Havlah, he said.

Autopsies were ordered for both men, he said.

He said Johnson, who operated a small gold mine nearby, apparently attempted to rescue Owen and Bedard after hearing the explosion but was knocked when he entered the gas-filled shaft.

Wilson, employed as a mechanic at another mining operation, said he also entered the shaft in a rescue attempt.

He was overcome by the gas near the shaft opening, Walkup said, but rescuers were forced to wait seven hours while they pumped the carbon monoxide out of the shaft with hoses and waited for helicopters to fly in oxygen masks before they could reach Wilson.

The explosion spewed gas, smoke and dust through the shaft and into the surrounding area where a mine crew cook witnessed the incident and contacted authorities by radio, Walkup said.

Officials said information concerning the Warrior mine explosion was sketchy because access to the area was limited to four-wheel drive vehicles or helicopters and communication was available only by radio.

Begin agrees on strategic cooperation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Thursday the United States and Israel have agreed on closer military cooperation to meet the threat of Soviet aggression in the Middle East.

In a news conference after two days of talks at the White House with President Reagan, Begin described the new military relationship as "strategic cooperation" against the "forces of totalitarianism and aggression."

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, at another [illegible] used the phrase "strategic alliance" and called it an evolution of the relationship that now exists.

Haig said it probably would focus on three areas, with details to be worked out between U.S. and Israeli defense officials:

• Prestocking in Israel of materials such as medical supplies for a U.S. Middle East Rapid Deployment Force.

• Joint military exercises, most likely naval, involving both U.S. and American forces. But Begin said Israel is not asking for American troops to defend Israel, only the "tools to do it with."

• Formation of a joint U.S.-Israeli planning group focusing on the strategic external threat to the area.

Haig said U.S.-Israeli military cooperation also must be tempered by political considerations, both in terms of domestic opposition and international repercussions.

Both sides stressed the warmth and cordiality of the Reagan-Begin talks and the importance of rapport between two administrations.

On Capitol Hill, Begin reiterated his concern that the sale of the AWACS, part of an $8.5 billion deal including other military equipment, "represents a real, direct and serious danger to Israel's national security."

"We do not interfere in the discussions between two branches of the American government but, as members of the government responsible for Israel's security, we are duty-bound to tell the innermost truth and that is that this matter is very dangerous to our national security," he said.

Begin made the statement after separate meetings with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Budget cuts $37 billion off target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress would have to cut $37 billion more from the budget by the end of the month for President Reagan to meet his projected federal deficit next year, congressional budget experts said Thursday.

Earlier this year, Congress agreed to $35 billion in spending reductions for the new fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, after months of political battles and intensive White House pressure.

A new Congressional Budget Office forecast showed Congress would have to find about $37 billion in additional budget cuts for the administration to meet its projected budget deficit of $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982.

Congress and the administration assume some of those additional cuts — $15 billion worth — will be taken care of this month when Congress votes on specific funding bills during the appropriations process.

Even if Congress comes through on all of those assumed cuts, however, it still leaves a $22.5 billion gap between the budget office estimate and the administration's.

Therefore, budget office director Alice Rivlin told the House Budget Committee the fiscal 1982 budget deficit probably will be about $65 billion.

In the Senate, Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., said he would try to amend a debt ceiling bill that will come up for consideration this month with a measure giving the president authority to withhold funds appropriated by Congress.

Armstrong said his plan would give Congress 45 days to veto any such presidential impoundment.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the CBO report showed "some honest differences in assumptions." Speakes said Reagan feels "our budget is on target and it's a can-do budget that he is determined to accomplish."

Four Soviet ships pass near Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — A four-vessel Soviet task force headed away from Hawaii Thursday, ending speculation they might appear off Waikiki Beach.

Lt. Cmdr. Roger Copeland of the Navy's Third Fleet headquarters said the four were 115 miles southwest of the island of Kauai and heading generally west at 13 knots.

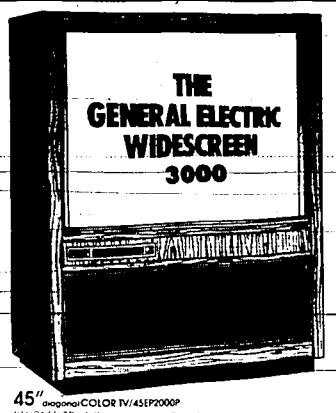

The Soviet ships passed between the islands of Maui and Hawaii Wednesday, coming within 12 nautical miles of land. Their course at dark would have put them in international waters off Waikiki Beach by sunrise.

A second destroyer, dispatched by the Navy Wednesday, trailed the little fleet, helping the Fife keep the ships under what the Navy prefers to call "observation" rather than "surveillance."

A Navy plane observing the Soviets previously remained on the ground at Barbers Point Naval Air Station, Copeland said.

People who overflew the task force said they observed laundry flying in the tropical breezes and Soviet crewmen on decks sunbathing. Copeland said it would not be unusual for off-duty personnel of any navy to be seen doing the same.

Friday briefing

Fire destroys Fairfield home

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County Sheriff's Office was investigating a forest fire that destroyed a summer home north of Fairfield Tuesday night, and U.S. Forest Service firefighters responded Thursday night to a one-acre fire in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

Sawtooth Forest dispatcher Len Miracle said eight firefighters were sent Thursday at about 3 p.m. to a fire, apparently started by lightning, near Pole Creek in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

The one-acre fire did not appear to be spreading, Miracle said.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden said fire crews responded at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday to a blaze on private and national forest land near Little Smoky Creek, 17 miles northwest of Fairfield.

The fire was reported by personnel at the Big Smoky Guard Station, who spotted flames coming from a propane tank, Madden said. One summer home was lost in the blaze.

Air Force jet recovered

A board of Air Force officers will examine the wreckage of the twin-engine Talon jet, Thunderbird No. 1, in an attempt to find out what caused it to crash on takeoff Tuesday and skid into Lake Erie.

Both the pilot, Thunderbirds commander Lt. Col. David L. Smith, and his crew chief, Staff Sgt. Dwight Roberts, were able to eject from the crippled jet.

Brutality indictments dropped

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday threw out brutality indictments against six city detectives and a former police officer accused of beating and intimidating witnesses, saying government lawyers coerced the grand jury into returning indictments.

"We are convinced that the defendants have been denied their constitutional rights not to be brought to trial except after a valid indictment," said U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier in the 16-page decision.

Wilder teachers back on job

WILDER (UPI) — Wilder teachers returned to work Thursday after striking Wednesday over salaries, benefits and grievance procedures wages, officials said.

Union and school representatives said the strike was called off when negotiators agreed to return to the bargaining table after hearing complaints from about 120 district patrons. Both sides said Thursday they were confident an agreement could be reached soon.

Larry Isom, board spokesman, said the teachers Wednesday night were offered an 8 percent salary increase and full family medical insurance, plus other items that had been contested.

Judge questions Franklin jury

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Judge Jay Banks halted testimony in the first-degree murder trial of avowed racist Joseph Paul Franklin Thursday while he questioned jurors to see if they had read recent news accounts about the case.

The questions came a day after the mayor of Fort Wayne, Ind., said the FBI had told him Franklin was the prime suspect in the sniper-wounding of National Urban League President Vernon Jordan.

Banks cautioned jurors that news stories "tend to editorialize." He warned the 12-member panel not to read or listen to any stories about the proceedings and told them to confine their attention to evidence presented in court.

Searchers give up on escapees

AURORA, Mo. (UPI) — Frustrated, weary law officers Thursday called off a two-day manhunt in the Ozark thickets of southwest Missouri for three convicts authorities said were "desperate enough to do anything."

Lawrence County Sheriff David Tatum said although he privately feared the fugitives might still be "holed up somewhere," officers had exhausted every lead.

Daredevil lands on skyscraper

NEW YORK (UPI) — A daredevil parachutist bit for "the sport of it" dropped safely from the skies Thursday to the roof of the 110-story World Trade Center, a quarter of a mile above the ground.

The latest feat of derring-do involving the soaring twin-towered skyscraper passed almost unnoticed by busy New Yorkers in the streets below.

However, about 20 tourists on the observation roof of the south tower were jolted when the chutist, John Carta, 35, wafted down in a white suit to join them.

Olmstead supports tax cut

BOISE (UPI) — House Speaker Ralph Olmstead said Thursday he will promote a Reagan-style tax-cut plan for Idaho during the 1982 legislative session.

Olmstead, Twin Falls, a Republican candidate for governor, said his program would be patterned after the Reagan tax package and would be aimed at giving incentives to businesses and providing relief for property taxpayers.

Generally outlining his proposals to the Idaho Press Club, Olmstead said he would push bills to provide investment tax credits for businesses and an accelerated depreciation schedule for property taxes.

Solidarity ends congress

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — The first half of Solidarity's national congress ended Thursday by giving union chief Lech Walesa a mandate for a "dictatorship" to strengthen the federation and challenging Communist rule with a call for free national elections.

Rioting erupted Thursday night in the central manufacturing city of Konin, triggered by street fighting between gypsies and local youths, the official news agency PAP reported.

Chicago bishop under investigation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal prosecutors said Thursday they are investigating charges Cardinal John P. Cody, head of the nation's biggest Catholic diocese, illegally diverted church funds to enrich a woman he describes as his cousin.

Church spokesmen "categorically" denied any wrongdoing.

The Chicago Sun-Times, in a copyright story, said Cody, 73, may have diverted as much as $1 million in tax-exempt church funds to enrich Helen Dolan Wilson, 74, a childhood friend and longtime confidante who has been described at various times as Cody's sister, niece and cousin.

Mrs. Wilson, who is not a blood relation to the Cardinal, said the allegations are nothing more than a "vicious joke." Cody was unavailable for comment.

Among other things, the newspaper said, Cody financed a $100,000 vacation home for Mrs. Wilson in Florida.

The newspaper said a federal grand jury last January subpoenaed both Cody's and Mrs. Wilson's personal records and the records of the archdiocese.

"The church categorically denies there has been any misuse of church funds," the Rev. Monsignor Francis A. Brackin, vicar general, said. He also accused the newspaper of harboring an "anti-Catholic bias."

In a statement released later in the day, Brackin said Cody is "deeply saddened by the charges against him, the church and his own family."

"He has never violated the trust that dedicated Catholic priests, religious and lay people, as well as many in other religious communities, have placed in him," Brackin said.

"Allegations that he has misused church funds are wrong and misguided. Innuendoes about dear members of his family are erroneous and tragically painful."

Jeremy Margolis, an assistant U.S. attorney, confirmed an investigation was under way.

"We acknowledge this office has received allegations of improper diversion of church funds by Cardinal John P. Cody," Margolis said. "As in all cases referred to this office, we have the responsibility of determining the accuracy of those allegations and whether any federal laws have been violated."

He did not say when the allegations were first made or who made them.

Mrs. Wilson, divorced in 1939, said, "God no," when asked if the story were true but she neither confirmed nor denied that Cody bought her a Florida home.

"I think it's a vicious joke," she said, in an interview with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Wilson also disputed a Sun-Times statement that she and Cody were not related. The Sun-Times said Mrs. Wilson's mother died in 1912 and her father married Cody's aunt a year later.

ply. "They're a great deal more accurate than horses. If a mule kicks at you and misses, it's because he didn't want to hit you. He was just warning you."

Looking at his boots and laughing, Littlefield admitts he's been on the receiving end more than once. But his mules apparently have a soft spot for their owner.

"I'm still alive."

In the exotic-breeds competition, Susan Munsee placed first with a simmento, Scot Tverdy of Buhl won second place with a hereford-lemosin, Mark Tverdy of Castleford placed third with a simmental-hereford, Gus Kohntopp of Buhl won fourth place with a simmenta cross and Chad Smith of Filer captured fifth place with a simmental-hereford-angus.

Thursday marked Twin Falls Day at the fair, with many local offices and businesses closed to allow employees to attend the fair.

Today is West End Day, with many offices and businesses in Filer, Buhl and Castleford anctipated to close in observance of the event.

Thursday marked the climax for many youngsters who prepared demonstrations as part of their 4-H projects.

And the nervous butterflies-in-the-stomach syndrome was apparent with some of the young participants.

Outside the pavilion building, Tammy Scott and Liz Allard demonstrated the finer points of goat fitting and showing as a team entry. Seconds after answering the final questions from the audience, the two girls led their goats away under the trees, glanced at each other and said, "whew!"

Their poise and demonstration of knowledge before a crowd of 25 people won them a blue ribbon in the intermediate division of 4-H agriculture demonstrations.

Myrna Kastner, extension home economist, explained that the demonstration competition gives 4-H'ers an opportunity to develop leadership and the ability to carry things through from the beginning to the end. But the biggest learning experience comes from facing a crowd of people and explaining something clearly.

Ned Quigley won the trophy in the junior division for his demonstration, "Dead or Alive," on calf care. Ryan Slack, also from that division, won a blue ribbon and will go on to district competition.

In the 4-H home economics demonstration competition, trophies were won by Kim Murphy, 10, of Twin Falls, for her presentation, "Stories for Young Children," and by Christine Rathburn, 12, of Twin Falls, for her discussion of sewing tips, "Get the Point."

Trophy winners in the 4-H miscellaneous demonstration competition were: Gail Hazen, 8, of Twin Falls, for her talk on lawn mower safety; Maureen Evans, 11, of Twin Falls, for her discussion on the treatment of parvo virus; Rhonda Kistler, 15, of Twin Falls, for a demonstration on dog training; and Sherry Stalley, 15, and Mike Floyd, 15, both of Twin Falls, for their presentation on gourmet cooking for dogs.

Nancy Nass, 16, of Twin Falls, won all five first-place awards in the Suffolk class, adding on to her record of winning all but one such competition in the past three years.

Nass didn't profess to be surprised, saying she doesn't rely on any secret formula for success.

"We just have good sheep," she said.

In the Southdown breed, Julie Edwards of Filer won first place in the ewe and ewe lamb categories. Chris Lewis, 13, of Filer, won first place in the ewe lamb, ewe and lamb, and ram lamb categories. John Armga won first place in the working ewe category.

In cross-breeds lamb competition, victories were shared by Jeff Sharp of Filer, who placed first in ewe and lamb, and Mike Ruffing, who won in the ewe lamb, yearling ewe, working ewe and ram lamb contests.

Rob Champlin of Twin Falls benefited by being the sole entrant in the FFA sheeping breeding competition, capturing first-place ribbons in the ram, over one year; ewe, one year and over; ewe lamb; two breeding ewes; and the flock categories.

Buhl agriculture teacher Andy Wiseman, who supervised the FFA competition, said he was disappointed by the low turnout.

"I think it's not encouraged that much, and it does take an awful lot of work to it," he said.

Grassley said it was vital to be sure that Mrs. O'Connor would not turn out to be "as great a surprise" to Reagan as former Chief Justice Earl Warren was to former President Dwight Eisenhower.

Responding to questions, Mrs. O'Connor testified on:

• Women in military combat: She opposes women being shot at on a battlefield but said "pushing a button" behind the lines would be different.

• Forced busing: She had as an Arizona legislator voted for a proposal urging federal officials to end forced busing in desegregation cases. "I just don't think it's a system that's very beneficial to the child."

• Television in courtrooms: She had not excluded cameras from her trial court and felt it had worked well.

• Open courtrooms: While pretrial publicity may jeopardize the right of a fair trial, courtroom doors should be left open to the media as much as possible since there are other alternatives such as changing the location of the trial.

• Prior restraint of publication of information the government believes would jeopardize national security: The government has a heavy burden to prove there is clear and present danger to national security before the information can be suppressed.

• The Miranda warning against self-incrimination: Its use has not resulted "in the inability of police to be reasonably successful in obtaining information and securing statements (from suspects)."

• Rules excluding certain evidence from trial: It has had great impact on drug-related crime in Arizona and "there are times when perfectly relevant evidence — sometimes the only evidence — has been excluded."

In the Magic Valley, the need for irrigation water will be a little above normal through Tuesday. Conditions for harvesting operations, other outside farm work and hay drying will be generally good through the first of the week.

Pan evaporation is forecast at .28 inch today and Saturday. Winds will be 5 to 12 mph today, creating fair to good spraying conditions.

The extended forecast calls for little change through Tuesday with temperatures near to slightly above normal. Highs will range from 75 to 85 degrees and lows will be from 45 to 55.

Mine blast kills three in northern Idaho

RIGGINS (UPI) — Two hundred pounds of dynamite exploded in a gold mine in an apparent accident that killed three miners and injured a fourth, authorities said Thursday.

About 20 rescuers wearing oxygen masks entered the 400-foot mine shaft in the mountainous area of North-Central Idaho Thursday, pulling out the bodies of Artie Johnson, 50, Glen Bedard, 22, and Morgan Owen, 20.

Sheriff Robert "Bud" Walkup said Rocky Wilson, 33, was hospitalized for treatment for inhalation of the toxic gas.

"I don't see at this time any signs of negligence" by the mine operator, the Havlah Group, said Bud Trussell, supervising mining engineer with the Mine Safety and Health Administration field office in Boise.

"It's probably just one of these things where somebody made a mistake," he said.

Trussell said a preliminary investigation by three federal officials at the scene indicated either Owen or Bedard probably had touched off the explosives accidentally.

Walkup said officials believed Owen was near the dynamite — at the base of the horizontal shaft in the side of Marshall Mountain 38 miles east of Riggins — when the explosion occurred late Wednesday.

He said Owen probably was killed in the explosion while Bedard was overcome by the carbon monoxide. Both men worked for Havlah, he said.

Autopsies were ordered for both men, he said.

He said Johnson, who operated a small gold mine nearby, apparently attempted to rescue Owen and Bedard after hearing the explosion but was killed when he entered the gas-filled shaft.

Wilson, employed as a mechanic at another mining operation, said he also entered the shaft in a rescue attempt.

He was overcome by the gas near the shaft opening, Walkup said, but rescuers were forced to wait seven hours while they pumped the carbon monoxide out of the shaft with hoses and waited for helicopters to fly in oxygen masks before they could reach Wilson.

The explosion spewed gas, smoke and dust through the shaft and into the surrounding area where a mine crew cook witnessed the incident and contacted authorities by radio, Walkup said.

Officials said information concerning the Warrior mine explosion was sketchy because access to the area was limited to four-wheel drive vehicles or helicopters and communication was available only by radio.

Begin agrees on strategic cooperation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Thursday the United States and Israel have agreed on closer military cooperation to meet the threat of Soviet aggression in the Middle East.

In a news conference after two days of talks at the White House with President Reagan, Begin described the new military relationship as "strategic cooperation" against the "forces of totalitarianism and aggression."

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, at another news conference, used the phrase "strategic alliance" and called it an evolution of the relationship that now exists.

Haig said it probably would focus on three areas, with details to be worked out between U.S. and Israeli defense officials:

• Prestocking in Israel of materials such as medical supplies for a U.S. Middle East Rapid Deployment Force.

• Joint military exercises, most likely naval, involving both U.S. and American forces. But Begin said Israel is not asking for American troops to defend Israel, only the "tools to do it with."

• Formation of a joint U.S.-Israeli planning group focusing on the strategic external threat to the area.

Haig said U.S.-Israeli military cooperation also must be tempered by political considerations, both in terms of domestic opposition and international political repercussions.

Both sides stressed the warmth and cordiality of the Reagan-Begin talks and the importance of rapport between two administrations.

On Capitol Hill, Begin reiterated his concern that the sale of the AWACS, part of an $8.5 billion deal including other military equipment, "represents a real, direct and serious danger to Israel's national security."

"We do not interfere in the discussions between two branches of the American government but, as members of the government responsible for Israel's security, we are duty-bound to tell the innermost truth and that is that this matter is very dangerous to our national security," he said.

Begin made the statement after separate meetings with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Budget cuts $37 billion off target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress would have to cut $37 billion more from the budget by the end of the month for President Reagan to meet his projected federal deficit next year, congressional budget experts said Thursday.

Earlier this year, Congress agreed to $35 billion in spending reductions for the new fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, after months of political battles and intensive White House pressure.

A new Congressional Budget Office forecast showed Congress would have to find about $37 billion in additional budget cuts for the administration to meet its projected budget deficit of $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982.

Congress and the administration assume some of those additional cuts — $15 billion worth — will be taken care of this month when Congress votes on specific funding bills during the appropriations process.

Even if Congress comes through on all of those assumed cuts, however, it still leaves a $22.5 billion gap between the budget office estimate and the administration's.

Therefore, budget office director Alice Rivlin told the House Budget Committee the fiscal 1982 budget deficit probably will be about $65 billion.

In the Senate, Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo., said he would try to amend a debt ceiling bill that will come up for consideration this month with a measure giving the president authority to withhold funds appropriated by Congress.

Armstrong said his plan would give Congress 45 days to veto any such presidential impoundment.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the CBO report showed "some honest differences in assumptions." Speakes said Reagan feels our budget is on target and it's a can-do budget ... that he is determined to accomplish."

Four Soviet ships pass near Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — A four-vessel Soviet task force headed away from Hawaii Thursday, ending speculation they might appear off Waikiki Beach.

Lt. Cmdr. Roger Copeland of the Navy's Third Fleet headquarters said the four were 115 miles southwest of the island of Kauai and heading generally west at 13 knots.

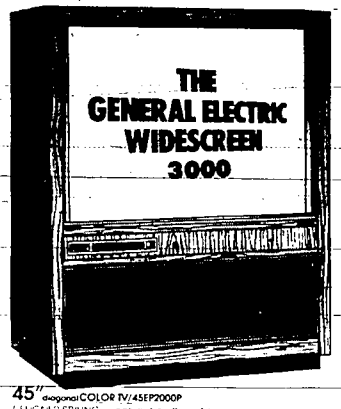

The Soviet ships passed between the islands of Maui and Hawaii Wednesday, coming within 12 nautical miles of land. Their course at dark would have put them in international waters off Waikiki Beach by sunrise.

A second destroyer, dispatched by the Navy Wednesday, trailed the little fleet, helping the Fife keep the ships under what the Navy prefers to call "observation" rather than "surveillance."

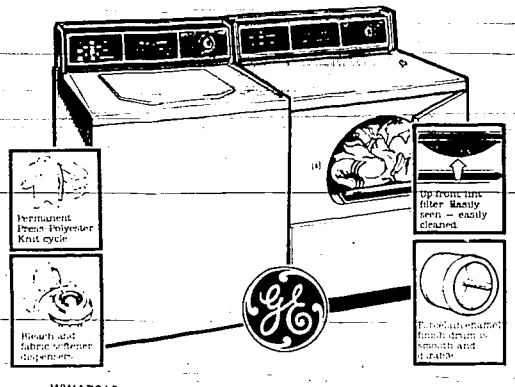

A Navy plane oberving the Soviets previously remained on the ground at Barbers Point Naval Air Station, Copeland said.

People who overflew the task force said they observed laundry flying in the tropical breezes and Soviet crewmen on decks sunbathing. Copeland said it would not be unusual for off-duty personnel of any navy to be seen doing the same.

Public TV action answers criticism

The 1982 Legislature should strongly reconsider funding public television in Idaho, based on action Wednesday by the State Board of Education.

In response to the sacking of public TV's budget by lawmakers last year, the state board has opted to shift administration of program policies and practices to an independent commission. That, board members reason, should answer the lawmakers' complaint that there was no watchdog over public TV funds.

Unless this commission has clear-cut authority, however, lawmakers may not take it as a serious move to watch how taxpayer money is spent. The commission would not have that authority, but would only recommend policy, according to the Board of Education's definition of policy and responsibility.

Although its role could be strengthened, the commission idea is a good one. Heading the group would be a chief coordinator, who would work with the commission and the stations to implement policy.

Establishing the commission will be easy. Convincing the Legislature to once again fund public TV is another matter. Last year, lawmakers axed $1.1 million in public TV support. In a later, last-ditch move, just $95,000 was appropriated and that only to maintain the state's microwave network.

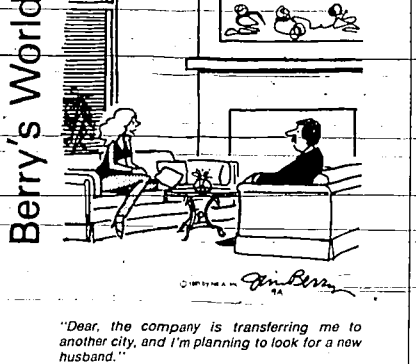

In addition to forming the commission, the Board of Education will ask for $336,000 next year for the state's three stations to keep them operating through 1982. In 1983, the board will ask for $1.1 million. Without that support, it's likely the state would lose at least two of its stations.

Yet, public TV does enjoy widespread public support. Boise station KAID will enjoy even more exposure in the Magic Valley starting Oct. 1 when Magic Valley Cablevision substitutes it for the Salt Lake public broadcasting station now carried.

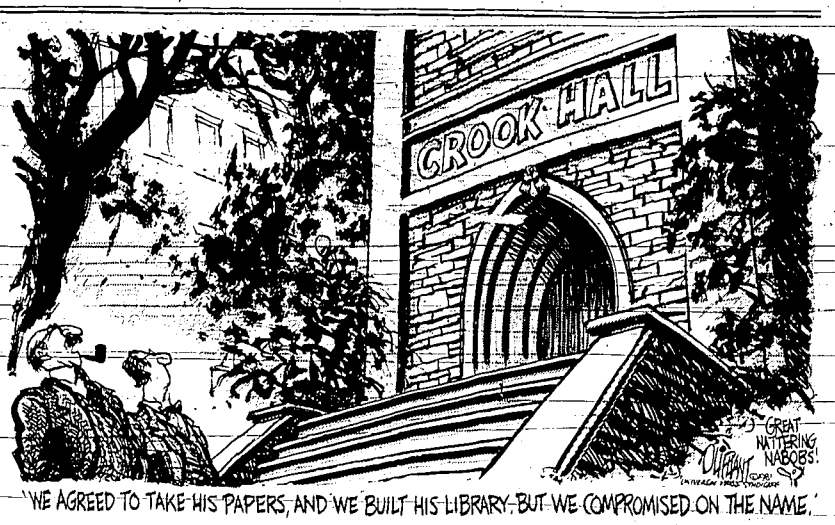

Public television today is the only alternative to commercial television programming. It offers a myriad of local and national educational opportunities that can be used in the home as well as in the schools.

In Idaho in particular, public TV can unite the state as no other single media can. Indeed, 95 percent of all Idahoans have access to public television.

The state has been a pioneer in the development of public broadcasting. Steps taken Wednesday by the Board of Education are intended to ensure public TV's future. Lawmakers now should respond to this show of faith by resuming funding starting in 1982.

Flaws in affirmative action

© Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department published a set of proposed new regulations the other day, intended to end some of the Mickey Mouse requirements of "affirmative action."

The rules would in fact get the government off the backs of about 150,000 small contractors, but the proposals leave a vast deal to be desired.

The trouble with the proposed new rules is at bottom the trouble with the present rules. The rules are fundamentally flawed by a fundamental flaw. "The objective of an affirmative action program," says the department, "is equal employment opportunity." But the two are mutually exclusive. There is no way under moon or sun that these opposing purposes can be reconciled.

One might as logically say that the objective of peace is war, or the objective of sin is virtue. The whole idea of affirmative action is to give favored treatment to certain people — blacks, women or Hispanics. They are to be specially recruited and hired in place of equally qualified other persons, notably whites and males. Thus the principle of "equal opportunity" flies out the window. The rule of affirmative action is Orwell's rule at the Animal Farm: All the animals are equal, but some are more equal than others.

The proposed new rules, like the old ones, solemnly propound the same folly. Time magazine thought it had stumbled over something new and significant in two provisions saying that the rules shall not be used to discriminate against "any" qualified employee because of race, color, sex and so forth. Time thought the language would flatly forbid an employer from favoring one race over another. But the sections are not new. They have been there all along and they remain in irreconcilable conflict with other sections that require contractors to establish specific "goals" for minorities and women, to make good-faith efforts "to employ minorities and women evenly on each contract," and actively to "seek and recruit" minority and female workers.

Even in the Humpty-Dumpty world of Washington, where words mean what the bureaucracy chooses them to mean, and neither more nor less, this semantic razzle-dazzle is remarkably glaring. In the name of prohibiting discrimination, contractors must discriminate. This is known as "reverse discrimination" or "benign discrimination," but a hundred adjectives cannot realistically modify the noun. Discrimination is still — discrimination.

For the moment, let it go. The Supreme Court has smiled upon this oxymoronic nonsense, and the point need not be labored. The new rules would have the useful effect of exempting small contractors — those employing fewer than 250 workers on federal contracts of $1 million or less — from the elaborate hocus-pocus still required of the larger employers. This is net gain.

The new rules also would abandon the precise "goals" of the present rules. Under the existing program, contractors must make an effort to hire at least 6.9 percent women in every craft classification. If a job requires 30 cement finishers, two should be female. Seen any female cement finishers lately? No one seems to know precisely how the 6.9 percent quota was arrived at. The figure emerged from some study of demographics in craft industries in 1978. A resident necromancer in the Labor Department multiplied 3.1 percent by a factor of 2.21, heaven knows why, and nine-tenths of a female carpenter wound up in the Federal Register.

Despite these gains, the new rules would continue an oppressive paperwork burden on the 50,000 companies that employ 75 percent of all workers on federal projects. These employers still would have to develop elaborate programs of affirmative action; they still would have to file nit-picking reports replete with "progression line charts" and "applicant rejection ratios by minority and sex." And all contractors, large and small alike, would remain subject to the basic provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Black spokesmen and women's libbers are hollering against the proposed changes. They see a good thing made worse. My own thought is that the changes would make a bad business just a little bit better.

White House restoring past regality

By HELEN THOMAS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Many of the so-called "imperial trappings" have been restored to the White House after a major attack on the presidential perks during the Carter years.

President Jimmy Carter, a populist, came into office forswearing the goodies that came with the turf. He carried his own garment bag even after he became president, much to the surprise of some of the longtime butlers.

He also sold the presidential yacht Sequoia and eliminated chauffeured limousines intended for top aides, except for the one used by national security affairs adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

About 200 television sets were removed from the White House offices by Hugh Carter Jr., a relative who ran the administrative side of the White House with an iron hand. Carter's frugality was carried so far he even sent bills for rolls and coffee to congressmen who came to the White House for breakfast.

He was about to get rid of Camp David, once known as Shangri La, in the Maryland mountains, but when he visited the retreat for the first time, he rapidly changed his mind.

Hailing from the village of Plains, Ga., and elected in a backlash atmosphere against the ostentation and lavish use of government funds for personal comforts by some of his predecessors, Carter thought austerity and simplicity were what the people wanted.

At one point, it was decreed that the Marine Band should play Irving Berlin's "Always" instead of "Hail to the Chief."

Instead of applauding the sacrifices, polls showed that the public wanted more formality, more ceremony, more royal touches to set the president apart. In his last two years in office, some of the perks were restored and the Marine Band was striking up "Hail to the Chief" for Carter's arrivals and departures.

Before the Carters left the White House, longtime observers felt they had entertained as elegantly, as hospitably and as well as any of their recent predecessors. And Rosalynn Carter was as impeccably groomed, with a better figure to boot, than some of the first ladies who lived in the White House before her.

Nevertheless, one well known columnist heralded the election of Ronald Reagan as a return to "class" in the White House, a remark that deeply hurt the Carters.

With the advent of the Reagans, so far there has been no perceptible criticism of the display of wealth, although the splash of jewelry, mink and sables during the inauguration caused a stir.

The president and Mrs. Reagan take the good life in their stride and their aides, if anything, seek to gild their surroundings with the extras.

The evidence is everywhere: Unarmed Marine guards in full regalia man the doors of the West Wing to welcome official visitors; and for the first time the presidential seal has been placed over the door.

Top White House aides also have access to chauffeured limousines to take them to and from work.

Fresh flowers are everywhere in the West Wing. The are geranium plantings flanking the various entrances and orchid plants dominate the family quarters.

Although they are California western in their manner and dress when they are in residence at their mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, the Reagans have not transferred the look to the White House, and they do not hold barbecues on the south lawn.

They have kept the same friends, mostly the wealthy "kitchen cabinet" coterie, who have the money to live part time in the East and are often at the White House. And in many ways, except for formal functions, the Reagans are continuing their familiar lifestyle.

When a reporter who had been covering the Reagans' social outings in California and Washington for the past eight months asked an advance man whether they had any "poor" people, he smiled and wisecracked: "I think he knows my name."

Crime has led to domestic arms race escalation

© Washington Post Writers Group

BOSTON — I spent much of this summer on an island in Maine where people leave their doors unlocked.

On this island it is a major crime wave when teen-agers knock down the mail boxes.

I know now that the open door, the keys left in the car ignition, the late-night walks all added to my summer sense of freedom.

But it's not like that in many places.

Back home, my life is once again locked and alarmed. It has to be. In the city, in 12 months, one of my neighbors was robbed; one of my colleagues had her house burned; another had his tape deck ripped out of a car. The usual. We, the lucky ones, only lost a bicycle. But we worried about noises, parking garages, strangers.

There is, I realize now, a certain buttoned-up inhibition on my everyday life. I have adjusted to this reluctantly. Yet I have thought more about self-defense in the last year than in the previous decade. I haven't adjusted to that.

During the last weekends on this island, I found myself fascinated by stories about guns. I read that one awesome piece about the 3-year-old boy in rural Maryland who shot his mother with the .357 magnum he thought was a toy. "Is this what I pull, mommy?" he asked before the bullet entered her chest.

It was a perfect anti-gun show piece, embodying every terrifying reason I can list against owning a gun. Children. Innocence. Accident.

The words the father, Bill McCall, told a newspaper reporter are still vivid to me. "It's not a friendly world. It made sense to have some protection . . . What's hard to take is that I got the .357 specifically to protect the most important people in my life."

Soon after that I read the cover story in Esquire magazine by novelist Chip Eliot. It included just about every reason I can list in favor of owning a gun: Criminals. Danger. Self-defense.

Eliot and his wife, a psychiatrist, went from lamenting handguns to owning them in ten weeks. The world he describes in Venice, Calif., was, you see, not friendly. Where McCall fantasized burglaries, Eliot experienced them. Their life was replete with robberies, muggings, car burnings.

Eliot bought a gun and finally used it in self-defense. "I am not a macho guy," he wrote. "I was not coming on like James Bond and I was not being territorial or aggressive. I was simply protecting my right to walk around town with a lousy $35 in my pocket and not be afraid for my life."

His words are filled with nearly as many regrets as McCall's. His Esquire piece is an angry one, full of the rage of a man who has changed in ways he doesn't admire. "I'm not proud of this. I did not swallow it easily, either." There is the bitterness of a man who felt forced to choose between being victimized or armed, being a sucker or a hard-liner.

The two families both had extraordinary experiences: A 3-year-old who shot his mother. A couple robbed again and again and again, past their ideological breaking point.

But they also carry everyday personal arguments in the debate about becoming part of the arming of America. The failure to control crime and the failure to control handguns have both led to this sort of domestic escalation of an arms race.

The more threatened people feel, the more likely they are to arm. Then arming takes on a life of its own. Every time someone is killed by a handgun, the cry goes out for handgun control and the sales go up. The fact that there are 50 million handguns goads some people to protest and others to protect. The failure of gun control spins sales even further.

Most of us have gotten used to living behind locked doors. Most of us don't want to get used to living with guns. The fear of accident, the maiming, murderous mistake is still greater than the fear of crime. Even as I write this, a story comes over the wire about a 25-year-old Baltimore man who shot his 21-year-old friend . . . by mistake.

Yet how easily the fears can change. How easily we can, through our own insecurity, add another weapon, another instrument of insecurity to the community arsenal.

As Eliot wrote about his life as a gun owner, "Sometimes I think this is a stupid, abhorrent, exasperating situation. And it is. But we've adapted to other stupid, abhorrent, exasperating situations: 20 percent interest rates. Iran. And now we've adapted to this one."

Not all of us. Not yet.

Reagan calls for tough spending limits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan gave his Cabinet a look Thursday at the tough new spending limits he will demand to forestall what he called the potential for economic collapse.

"This is not going to be a happy meeting for you," Reagan told his Cabinet officers as they sat down to a nearly two-hour session during which budget director David Stockman offered rough allocation estimates for fiscal years 1983 and 1984.

Line-by-line limits will come later, White House communications director David Gergen told reporters Reagan asked his lieutenants, "If no one does it, what happens to the country? All of us here know the economy would face an eventual collapse. I know it's a helluva challenge, but ask yourself: if not us, who; if not now, when?"

Stockman, according to Gergen, said no department will be asked to cut more than $4 billion annually in 1983 or 1984, and no agency — including the Defense Department — will escape with a reduction of less than $500 million a year.

Cumulatively, the total cuts would add up to some $30 billion in federal spending for 1983 and $44 billion in 1984, Gergen said. But he also said the Pentagon spending levels will be factored in at a later date.

No figures have been released, but administration officials have suggested cuts of $30 billion in military spending during the two years.

The president decided on a range of military budget cuts Wednesday after hearing the guns vs. deficit arguments of Stockman and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

To his Cabinet members, Reagan again vented frustration at the lukewarm reception Wall Street has accorded his economic policy. He told them he understands the "nervousness" because there has been no instant recovery, but said:

"We never promised it would be easy and we never promised it would be quick. We can't be stampeded now by frustration or fear. We have to stay on a steady, long-term course."

The president plans to make known the agency-by-agency budgetary limits at a Cabinet meeting tentatively set for next Tuesday.

Watt: Parks are safe

WORLAND, Wyo. (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt, on his first official return to his home state since he joined the Reagan administration Thursday offered assurances the national parks will not be opened to development.

Watt visited Gillette and Worland, and in Worland he was met by about 70 ranchers on horseback and in pickup trucks who gathered to show their support for his policies.

"As Secretary we are deeply concerned at the vicious attacks that are levied against you," Boyd Mills, president of the Independent Stockgrowers of America, told Watt. "We ask you not to become discouraged."

Despite the controversy that has surrounded Watt, no protestors were visible in the crowd.

Watt said his appearance before the Western Governors Conference in Jackson, Wyo., today will be "report-card time."

Lower interest rates predicted by next year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With both the White House and Congress predicting interest rates will drop next year, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Thursday it is up to President Reagan to take the first step toward bringing them down.

O'Neill discouraged the idea of legislation aimed at lowering interest rates, and Chairman Fernand St. Germain, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said legislation is not needed — Reagan already has broad powers to regulate credit and interest rates.

The Congressional Budget Office Thursday predicted interest rates next year will drop to an average of 12.4 percent, compared to the administration's projection of 10.5 percent. Interest rates currently are running around 20 percent.

Director Alice Rivlin said her office expects the rates to decline, beginning later this year, but "not to come plummeting."

At the White House, Reagan told a group of private economists he believes the high interest rates that jeopardize the success of his economic policy will decline "in the not too distant future."

But he did not say what, if any, pressure he plans to put on the Federal Reserve, which sets monetary policy. "I want to see the Fed use monetary restraint and be the fourth leg of our economic program," Reagan said.

House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois hinted Wednesday that members of Congress, flooded with constituent complaints on recent trips home, might become "jittery" and try to get at the high interest rates through legislation.

But O'Neill said the Federal Reserve Board is merely following Reagan's policies in keeping the rates high.

If Reagan changed policies, O'Neill said, "I think the Federal Reserve would respond."

Liberals suggest modest tax cut alternative

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Liberal House Democrats moved Thursday to revive a more modest tax cut plan the House rejected in July in favor of Reagan's proposal.

The Democrats said their plan "made good sense two months ago and makes even better sense now" when high interest rates continue and projected budget deficits are larger than previously estimated.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., conceding he was "starting to sound like a Republican," said what the economy "really needs these days is business confidence" and that will only come with balanced federal budgets.

"This country is not going to get going again economically until we get interest rates down," he said.

The group's tax proposal would require $40 billion less in government borrowing next year by phasing in tax cuts for individuals and providing smaller reductions for the richest 25 percent of all taxpayers.

It also would eliminate provisions described by the Democrats as "corporate welfare," including increased depletion allowances for small oil companies, further exemptions from the windfall profits tax for large oil companies, tax exemptions for Americans living overseas, and tax breaks intended to help savings and loan institutions.

The congressmen cited the "rapid deterioration in the bond and stock markets and the crushing impact of continued high interest rates" despite the administration's optimistic forecasts when it persuaded Congress to pass the largest tax cut in history.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., anticipating doubts that Congress would reconsider the tax package after only a few months, said, "We have a lot better chance of that happening than meeting the administration's expectations on interest rates."

Dockworkers won't handle fumigated fruit

By United Press International

National Guard troops may be needed to load California lemons — fumigated against the Mediterranean fruit fly — onto ships headed for Japan.

Dockworkers refuse to handle the citrus, state legislators were told Thursday.

George Strathearn, chief deputy director of the state Food and Agriculture Department, said the action might be necessary because of the refusal of 2,300 longshoremen in Long Beach, Calif., to load fumigated fruit.

He accused employees of the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration of spreading reports among dock workers that handling the fruit would be dangerous for their health.

Longshore officials in Long Beach met with Sunkist Corp. representatives in an attempt to settle the dispute over handling of fumigated citrus for overseas shipment.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union local has refused to load containers of lemons bound for Japan, saying that EDB, or ethyelene dibromide, used by Sunkist to fumigate citrus against the Medfly, was toxic and a known cancer-causing agent that can also cause liver damage and sterility.

"The position of our union is that we will not handle any produce that has been fumigated with the chemical EDB," said Local 13 president Louis Rios.

Japan has imposed strict standards on imports of California fruit as a result of the Medfly outbreak. Lemons headed for the Land of the Rising Sun now must be fumigated with EDB and deeply chilled before the Japanese will agree to receive it.

Crime rate up 9 percent in 1980

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's crime rate jumped 9 percent last year with a murder, rape, robbery or aggravated assault committed every 24 seconds, the FBI reported Thursday.

The FBI's annual crime index of reported serious crimes for 1980 showed that 13 million offenses were reported by more than 15,000 law enforcement agencies nationwide in 1980.

The murder rate nationwide rose by 7 percent to 23,044 cases — one every 24 minutes, the index said. Men between the ages of 20 and 29 were the largest group of murder victims and firearms were the principal weapons used in committing the crimes.

The Southern states, the nation's most populous region, accounted for the largest volume of crime index offenses in 1980 with 31 percent. The North-Central and Western states recorded 24 percent each and the Northeastern states 21 percent.

The violent crimes of murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault increased 11 percent during 1980, and worked out to one such offense every 24 seconds. The property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft rose by 9 percent.

Forcible rape increased 8 percent, robbery 18 percent and aggravated assault 7 percent. Burglary was up 14 percent, larceny-theft 8 percent and motor vehicle theft 2 percent.

Demos consider changing parties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican National Chairman Richard Richards says several conservative Democratic congressmen are considering switching parties.

Richards said Wednesday night he and House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois will meet next week with one GOP state chairman who was approached by a Democratic House member as a preliminary step toward negotiating directly with the member.

He refused to identify the member and would only say he is from a Southern state.

Richards said that while at present there is only a "possibility not a probability" of winning Democratic converts, he is optimistic.

"If we can pick off a few of the 'Boll Weevils,' we're within striking distance" of gaining control of the House after the 1982 election, Richards said. Democrats now hold a 27-seat edge in the House.

"Boll Weevils" is the term for conservative Democratic House members, mostly from Southern states like Texas and Georgia, who broke ranks and voted with President Reagan on his tax and budget cut programs.

"We are going to open some doors," Richards told a small group of reporters over dinner.

Richards said conservative Democrats who previously resisted converting to the GOP took soundings back home during the August congressional recess and found less opposition than expected to a party switch.

Busing bill stalls due to missing senators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate refused Thursday to kill a filibuster blocking passage of the most drastic curbs on school busing to move through Congress when seven senators who would have changed the outcome failed to show up.

The Senate voted 57-33 — three short of the required 60 — to break the dogged liberals who have refused to permit votes on anti-busing language.

Senate leaders immediately scheduled the fifth — and final — attempt for next Wednesday.

Thursday's vote was the fourth time the Senate has failed to reach the magic figure of 60 on anti-busing amendments to the Justice Department authorization bill in an on-again-off-again filibuster which has lasted since early July.

But the vote indicated that if all members had been present, the effort to stop the filibuster would have drawn 64 votes, four more than needed.

The filibuster is aimed at two amendments, both of which go far beyond any previous effort by Congress to stop court-ordered busing to desegregate schools.

The absent senators failed to return from their five-week recess in time for the vote although it has been on the schedule for Thursday since early in August.

Symms was in Pocatello for a short speech Thursday and later attended the Twin Falls County Fair. He is scheduled to leave Idaho for Washington, D.C., Sunday.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A faulty regulator switch on a transformer was blamed Thursday for the city's worst power outage in four years.

The 4 ½ hour blackout halted skyscraper elevators, stalled subways and jived the Big Apple in knots.

Fire marshals said there was no evidence of arson or sabotage in the fire and explosion at a Consolidated Editors plant that caused the power failure Wednesday.

After conducting an all-night investigation, the marshals said the blackout was caused by a faulty "feeder switch" on one of the five transformers at the plant. The switch regulates the flow of power to the transformer.

The blackout began at 3:25 p.m. and 52,000 customers lost power. Full power was not restored until 7:53 p.m.

The power failure blacked out three sections of Manhattan from Times Square to Wall Street, created huge traffic jams and shut down the nation's stock exchanges.

Subway service was crippled and tens of thousands of riders were stranded. At least 300 people were rescued from elevators and 966 police officers and 500 firefighters were called in or kept on overtime.

At Macy's department store on Herald Square, 5,000 customers and 1,000 employees were evacuated after the store's backup lighting system failed.

The city declared a state of emergency and only lifted it Thursday after 15 inspectors worked until 4 a.m. to restore the synchronization of 1,000 traffic lights.

Cooke seeks spy dismissal due to immunity promise

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (UPI) — The defense Thursday lined up three Air Force investigators and an expert on lie detector tests to testify in a bid to win dismissal of spy charges against a nuclear missile officer.

F. Lee Bailey, defending Air Force 2nd Lt. Christopher Cooke, 26, of Richmond, Va., on charges of passing Titan II missile secrets to the Soviets, said he hoped to conclude his case for dismissal with the testimony.

The witnesses were three members of the Air Force's Office of Special Investigations, the unit that questioned Cooke after his arrest in May, and an expert who helped give Cook a lie detector test after his arrest.

The defense has maintained during the preliminaries of the general court-martial that the charges should be dropped because the Air Force broke a promise to give Cooke immunity and an honorable discharge for revealing what he told the Soviets and taking a lie detector test.

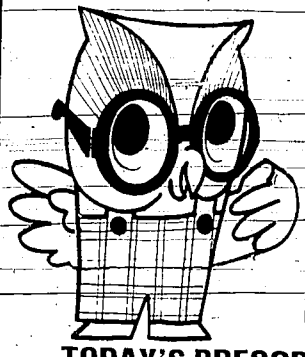

Prosecutors contend Cooke did not live up to his end of the bargain.

In Thursday morning's session, defense lawyers questioned Maj. Robert Mounts, an Air Force legal officer.

Mounts said he was writing legal advice for the Strategic Air Command on how to prosecute Cooke if he failed to cooperate when SAC, without his knowledge, decided not to grant immunity. He said he told SAC he thought Cooke had not broken the deal.

Sentence reduction denied

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Court Judge Theron Ward denied on Wednesday a Twin Falls man's request for a reduced prison sentence.

Ronnie LeRoy Heck, 31, sought relief from the sentence imposed on him three years ago. He claimed he did not plead guilty voluntarily to the three felony charges against him.

But a court hearing conducted Wednesday indicated an error in the court's records had been made. Ward's decision to correct the error resulted in a reduction of the original sentence. And that means Heck soon could be eligible for parole, according to his lawyer.

Heck pleaded guilty to first-degree burglary, assault with a deadly weapon and injuring jail property on Oct. 27, 1978.

Ward sentenced the defendant to serve up to 15 years in prison for burglary. In addition, he ordered Heck to serve up to five years on the assault charge, and he gave the defendant another sentence of up to five years for injuring jail property. Those two five-year sentences were to be served consecutively with the 15-year sentence.

At the time of his sentencing, Heck had spent 41 days in the Twin Falls County Jail. According to his petition, filed in 5th District Court, Heck claimed he pleaded guilty because Twin Falls police and Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies were beating him. He said he pleaded guilty to avoid further beatings.

Jim Meservy, Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor, called several police officers and sheriff's deputies to the witness stand to refute the charge.

Heck's lawyer, Twin Falls County deputy public defender Mike Powers, also sought a reduction in the sentence or a withdrawal of the original guilty plea on the grounds that his client was intoxicated the night of the burglary.

And Heck testified that although he entered Mark's Music, 100 Addison Ave. W., on Sept. 15, 1978, he had no intention of burglarizing the business.

Ward denied the request, but he said he did not intend to impose consecutive sentences on the defendant. He concluded some mistake in the court's records was responsible for the imposition of consecutive sentences.

In cases of multiple offenses, judges have the authority to impose either consecutive or concurrent sentences. Under a consecutive sentence, a defendant must serve each of his sentences separately. Under a concurrent sentence, all sentences are served at the same time.

Ward's decision to amend the sentencing order could result in an early release for Heck, although the state parole board makes the final decision.

"I would say in all probability, he'll be eligible for parole at the next meeting of the parole board," Powers said.

Record negligence awarded in suit

OREGON CITY, Ore. (UPI) — A $1-million judgment, believed to be the largest medical negligence verdict in the state's history, has been awarded in a cancer-death case.

The suit involved the death of Deborah Lucich, 27, in 1980.

Listed as plaintiffs along with the deceased woman's husband, Robert, 27, of Milwaukee and his daughter, Sunny, were her parents, Edward and Wilma Lancaster of Hansen.

A nine-woman, three-man jury reached a 9-3 verdict after almost five hours of deliberation in the case against the McLean Clinic in Oregon City.

Judge Charles Sams ruled that the clinic had been negligent, leaving it up to the jury to determine whether the delay in treatment caused the death of Mrs. Lucich, and to set the damages.

The suit claimed the clinic was negligent in its failure to repeat a mammogram and in its failure to diganose and treat the cancer for Lucich, a legal secretary. The clinic denied negligence, claiming that the cancer already had spread before Lucich went to the clinic for a check of a lump in her breast.

Evidence introduced during the trial included a 20-minute videotaped interview with Lucich shortly before her death, during which she expressed hope about the chemical treatment she was receiving, but she also said she was afraid of the idea of someone else raising her daughter.

Court orders new trial in field spraying suit

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Spraying potato fields sometimes creates more problems than it prevents.

A new trial has been ordered in the long-standing case of Thomas Helicopters Inc. vs. San Tan Ranches, both Gooding companies, over a disputed herbicide spraying five years ago.

Thomas Helicopters successfully sued San Tan during a nine-day trial in 1978 for non-payment of spraying services after San Tan charged the flight crew with negligent and ineffective spraying.

Wednesday, the Idaho Supreme Court unanimously overturned 5th District Court Judge Douglas Kramer's ruling that he settle the case himself rather than allow the issue to be decided by a jury.

According to the Supreme Court report: In 1976, San Tan Ranches hired the helicopter sprayers to cover potato fields with herbicide. Subsequent to the spraying, it became evident that the potato fields were infested with weeds.

San Tan brought suit against Thomas Helicopters, claiming it had been negligent in the application of the herbicides. After San Tan presented its evidence, Kramer directed a verdict in favor of Thomas Helicopters on the grounds that insufficent evidence had been presented to prove negligence, and that instead, San Tan was probably responsible for the failure.

In San Tan's appeal to the Supreme Court, the farming firm succesfully argued that enough evidence was presented to require the case to be decided by a jury, which had been ptesent during the trial.

In Wednesday's opinion, authored by Chief Justice Robert Bakes, the Supreme Court agreed the decision should not have been taken away from the jury, and it returned the case for a new trial.

"I heard nine days with a jury and determined after those presentations there was no evidence of negligence (on Thomas Helicopters part)," Kramer said Thursday. "San Tan directed where the spraying was to be done and bought and mixed the poison themselves.

"If the judge believes there is insufficient evidence to submit the question to the jury, he has the power to take the question away from the jury, make a ruling himself and save the court more trial time," Kramer said.

However, Kramer was not surprised or angered at the Supreme Court's reversal of his ruling, explaining that this happens occasionally to all district court judges.

"I have no hard feelings. They (Supreme Court justices) do their thing and I do mine," Kramer said. "I don't keep score, but far more of my rulings have been upheld than reversed."

A case in point: Also on Wednesday, the Supreme Court upheld Kramer's sentencing of Wendell Leroy West to five years in prison for a four-day spree of destroying property in Jerome and Camas counties in 1978 (see story below).

For members of the two parties in the herbicide spraying suit, the ruling probably means a return to a lengthy court trial.

As 5th District Court administrator, Kramer will reassign the case to a different judge. Like the first trial, the new hearing will be held in Gooding, although no date has been scheduled.

In Kramer's original ruling, Thomas Helicopters was awarded $15,893 from San Tan Ranches. The farming company also was ordered to pay Thomas Helicopters $13,131 for attorney fees, plus an additional $22,216 in attorney fees to Spray Right Inc., the company that had supplied the herbicide.

Vandal's prison sentence upheld by Supreme Court

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the five-year prison sentence imposed on Wendell Leroy West for damaging $12,000 in property during a four-day spree through Jerome and Camas counties in 1978.

West had appealed the sentence, contending that 5th District Judge Douglas D. Kramer abused his authority in imposing an "excessively harsh," maximum penalty for the charge of malicious injury to property.

In the majority opinion, written by Chief Justice Robert E. Bakes and released Wednesday, the court said Kramer handed down the correct sentence, considering West's juvenile record of convictions for petty larceny, telephone threats, a fish and game violation and West's "little, if any, remorse for his actions and conduct."

But Justice Stephen Bistline in a dissenting opinion said West, who was 18 at the time of the crime, should have been sent to the North Idaho Correctional Institution for rehabilitation — not to the Idaho State Penitentiary for incarceration with other, more violent criminals.

Along with two other youths, West was charged with stealing a pickup from Jerome County, driving the pickup to the mountains and "going on a four-day spree," the majority opinion said.

"They broke into a privately owned mining cabin in a remote area of Camas County and did extensive damage," it said. "Upon later examination of the cabin, the authorities found it to be a complete shambles. Food had been consumed, thrown all over the walls and scattered around the cabin and countryside.

"Bedding was strewn about. Blasting materials and other implements used in mining had been taken. The defendant and his companions apparently attempted to dynamite trees. They also cut a beam in the interior of the cabin, broke out windows and window frames and took a chain saw to some of the property in and about the cabin, including a refrigerator."

In appealing the five-year sentence, West had contended he should have obtained probation, a 120-day evaluation in the North Idaho institution or a lesser sentence in the penitentiary, considering his age, the nature of the crime and the fact that it was his first felony conviction.

But only Bistline agreed with West's contention that the sentence amounted to excessively harsh punishment.

Judge halts Franklin's trial, questions jurors on reading

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Judge Jay Banks halted testimony in the first-degree murder trial of avowed racist Joseph Paul Franklin Thursday.

The judge stopped the proceedings while he questioned jurors to see if they had read recent news accounts about the case.

The questions came a day after the mayor of Fort Wayne, Ind., said the FBI had told him Franklin was the prime suspect in the sniper-wounding of National Urban League President Vernon Jordan.

Banks cautioned the jurors that news stories "tend to editorialize." He warned the 12-member panel not to read or listen to any stories about the proceedings and told them to confine their attention to evidence presented in court.

When testimony resumed, police officers continued giving technical descriptions of evidence found in a vacant lot near the park where a sniper lay in wait for Fields and Martin.

Officer E. W. Christensen described tire tracks he photographed in the field. He also identified photographs of a mound of dirt behind the tire tracks where other officers found spent .30 caliber rifle cartridges.

Franklin's attorneys argued Wednesday that it was impossible to tell if the shots came from the field, or from the opposite direction inside the park.

Fort Wayne Mayor Winfield Moses said Wednesday, "The FBI feels almost certain that the person responsible is Joesph Paul Franklin, who is presently being held for murders in Utah. What they said is if he is executed for his crimes there, in their opinion the case is closed."

Jordan was shot in front of a Fort Wayne Motel on May 8, 1980. Franklin has not been charged with the crime and the FBI has said only that its investigation is continuing.

Banks did not mention the Jordan story specifically. But Franklin's attorney, David Yocom, called news agencies before Thursday's court session and requested copies of the story about Winfield's remarks.

All of the seven men and five women on the jury told the judge they hadn't read any recent news accounts about the Franklin case.

Franklin, a former member of the Ku Klux Klan and the American Nazi Party is charged with shooting and killing two black men as they jogged out of Liberty Park with two white teenaged girls on Aug. 20, 1980. If convicted, he could face the death penalty.

The 30-year-old Mobile, Ala., native has already been convicted in federal court and sentenced to life in prison for violating the civil rights of the two victims, Ted Fields, 20, and David Martin, 18, both of Salt Lake.

Franklin is also charged with sniper slayings of blacks in Indianapolis and Oklahoma City.

Utah woman justice must wait decision on review

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The first woman appointed to the Utah Supreme Court won't be sworn into office until the high court decides whether the State Senate has the authority to review judicial appointments.

Chief Justice Gordon Hall said Wednesday Justice-designate Christine M. Durham will have to wait a few weeks before joining the five-member court. However, Durham, a Third District Court judge will sit as a visiting justice during the September court calender.

Durham was named to the high court Tuesday by Democratic Gov. Scott Matheson to fill a vacancy created by the death of Chief Justice Richard Maughan.

The Republican-controlled Legislature earlier this year passed a law requiring State Senate approval of all judicial appointments made by the governor. But Matheson challenged the statute in court, contending that it was an unconstitutional intrusion by the Legislative Branch of government into the powers of the Executive Branch.

Officials unsure if skeletons linked to series of slayings

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — Officials said skeletons found in the woods were "human and probably female" but did not know whether they were remains of two girls feared murdered as part of a series of child killings.

"These remains were examined by an expert who stated they were human and probably female," said Supt. Bruce Northorp of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He said the condition of the remains made it impossible to identify them.

Northorp said police were still searching heavily wooded areas around Vancouver, hoping to discover the fate of Colleen Daignault, 13, of Surrey, British Columbia, who vanished in April, and Sandra Wolfsteiner, 16, of Langley, British Columbia, missing since May.

"We're looking for anything," he said.

Watt says protection his intent

BILLINGS, Mont. (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt has told a enthusiastic Republican crowd that his decisions about public lands have been aimed at protecting the environment.

"We can have environmental protection while we create jobs and improve our national defense," Watt said Wednesday during a speech at a $75-a-plate fund-raising dinner for Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont.

The controversial cabinet member promised the crowd of 600 he would manage the 768 million acres of federal land under his control — one-third of the country — for the benefit of taxpayers and "not for single elitist purposes."

Watt also claimed credit for defusing the Sagebrush Rebellion, the move among some officials in western states to seek control of federal lands within their states.

He told a news conference the Sagebrush Rebellion "is not a serious problem now" because his policies have been designed to make the federal government "a good neighbor, not an oppressive landlord."

While Watt spoke, opponents gathered at a counter-celebration in Billings dubbed the "Guess Watt's Coming to Dinner." More than 400 people paid $2 each for chili, wholewheat buns and lemonade — and speeches decrying Watt's policies.

Atiyeh pushes Columbia ports

TETON VILLAGE, Wyo. (UPI) — Oregon Gov. Vic Atiyeh said Wednesday he will press governors of coal-rich mountain states to consider Columbia River ports for coal exports rather than those in the Puget Sound area or in California.

"Whether it's Portland or Astoria or Kalama (Wash.), the Columbia River is the only logical place for shipments through the West Coast," said Atiyeh while appearing at the Western states' governors meeting.

Nuclear foes set up camp near plant

Sheriff's deputies went on 12 hour shifts, the National Guard mobilized support troops and the Coast Guard quarantined the coastal site from the sea.

Nuclear power plant workers planned a counter-demonstration against the protesters.

Both law enforcement and anti-nuclear activists were gearing up for a long-expected confrontation.

"We'll move when we feel we have enough people," said a spokesman for the protesters, Carl Ziechella — "possibly by the weekend, although it's possible to wait longer."

The faceoff was triggered by a federal decision Wednesday clearing the way for final approval in the next two weeks of the bitterly contested nuclear power plant on the scenic California coast, midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Abalone Alliance, a coalition of anti-nuclear groups, responded by calling for supporters throughout the nation to flock to the area.

Peanuts creator leaves hospital

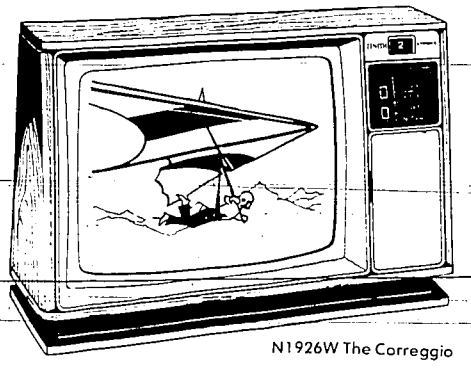

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — "Peanuts" comic strip creator Charles Schulz has been released from the hospital after undergoing open heart surgery last week.

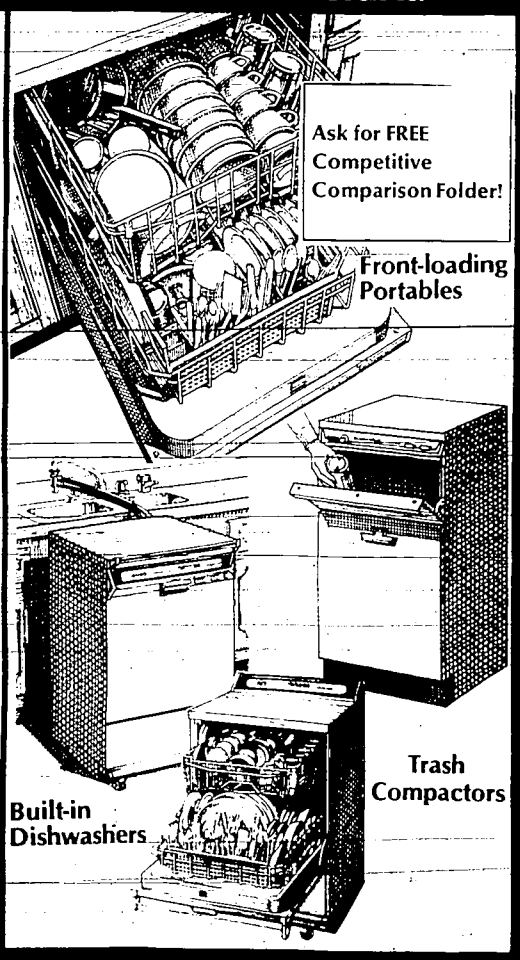

Schulz, 58, was released from Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital Wednesday. Before departing, he penned a memento of his stay on the wall of the cardiac recovery room, a hospital spokesman said.

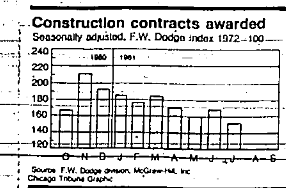

The cartoon showed Snoopy trying to operate a triblow, a devise used by post-operative patients to strengthen their lung capacity. The triblow is three glass tubes with a small black ball inside each. The patient tries to raise the balls in the tubes through lung power.

Chevette tops 40 mpg in test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An American-made car, the Chevrolet Chevette diesel, has broken the 40 mpg barrier for the first time.

Government fuel economy figures released Thursday also showed an increasing number of new American cars beat the 30 mpg mark.

The top miles per gallon honors for 1982 model cars went for the fifth straight year to the Volkswagen Rabbit diesel, a car the government considers an import even though it is partially made in the United States.

It rated 45 mpg, the highest figure ever recorded since the Environmental Protection Agency began its fuel economy tests. In EPA's 1981 model ratings, the manual four-speed transmission Rabbit diesel got 42 mpg.

The top-ranked gasoline-powered vehicle was a Honda Civic with a five-speed manual transmission, at 41 mpg.

The Chevette diesel is new on the market this year with an expected production of only 10,000 to 12,000 cars, a General Motors spokesman said. Its 40 mpg rating, for a manual five-speed transmission model, marks the first time an American-made car has tested out at that level.

In the EPA's ratings last year, the best domestic fuel economy was recorded by a Chevette, the Ford Escort and the Lincoln-Mercury Lynx — all at 30 mpg and all with gasoline engines. The year before, the best any American-made car could do was 26 mpg.

The EPA considers the ratings a consumer guide for comparison shopping purposes. While the industry relies heavily on the figures for advertising and promotion, the actual mileage any individual driver will experience depends on individual driving habits and the quirks of individual cars.

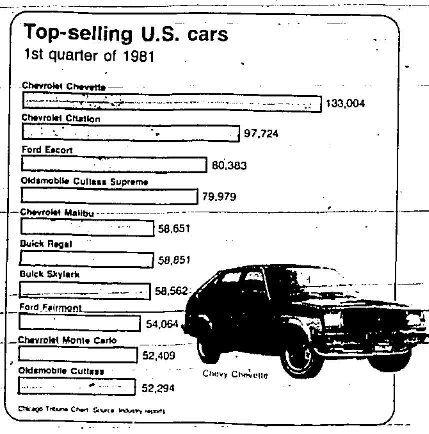

The ratings are based on tests made at an EPA facility at Ann Arbor, Mich., where cars are run on drive-simulation devices.

The poorest rated car was a Maserati Quattroporte at 8 mpg. The worst domestic-made car was a Cadillac Limousine at 10 mpg. Other poor performers were a Chevrolet Corvette at 15 mpg and a Buick Riviera, Oldsmobile Toronado and Porsche 928, all at 16.

Volkswagen Rabbit diesel, manual four-speed, 45; Volkswagen Rabbit diesel manual five-speed 43; Volkswagen Jetta diesel manual five-speed 43; Volkswagen Jetta diesel manual four-speed 42; Honda Civic manual five-speed 41; Isuzu I-Mark diesel manual four-speed 41; Chevrolette Chevette diesel manual five-speed 40; Dodge Colt manual four-speed 39; Isuzu I-Mark manual five-speed 39; Plymouth Champ manual four-speed 39.

Among the highest rated U.S.-made cars were the Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon, both manual four-speeds at 35 mpg; the Dodge 024 and Plymouth TC3-Turismo, both manual four-speeds at 34 mpg; the Ford Escort and Lincoln-Mercury Lynx, both manual four-speeds at 31 mpg; Pontiac J2000, Chevrolet Cavalier, manual four-speeds, at 30 mpg.

FTC judge drops cereal pricing case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Federal Trade Commission judge Thursday dismissed a controversial nine-year-old antitrust case that alleged the nation's leading breakfast cereal makers had conspired to fix prices.

The decision, which came amid efforts in Congress to force the agency to scrap the case, is subject to review by the full commission before any final decision on the case may be made.

But Alvin Berman, an administrative law judge for the FTC, ruled the agency's lawyers had failed to prove the Kellogg Corp., General Mills, Inc. and General Foods Corp. formed a "shared monopoly" of the breakfast cereal market that caused consumers to pay perhaps 15 percent more for cereals than they would have otherwise.

The FTC staff, attempting to prove a novel and controversial antitrust theory, had alleged the cereal makers by their very size so dominated the market that competition was smothered and prices were kept artificially high.

Berman, however, ruled the staff failed to prove the three companies engaged in price fixing. Because they failed to show that, he added, they have "failed to prove a price-fixing conspiracy or non-competitive pricing activity under a shared monopoly theory."

At the same time, Berman said his decision does not address the larger issue of whether a shared monopoly constitutes a violation of antitrust law.

William LaMothe, Kellogg board chairman, said his company is "delighted."

"It's been a real battle. It was just a matter of time until we convinced the FTC and members of Congress as to what was behind this whole shared monopoly theory," he told United Press International, adding he feels the shared monopoly concept has been "greatly discredited" by economists and Congress.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat was higher, corn and soybeans mixed and oats lower at the close Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was up 5¼ to 1¾ cents; corn off 1¾ to up 2; oats off 1¾ to 1; and soybeans off 3 to up ¼ cent.

It appeared traders were following outside markets most of the day.

Prices rallied early in the session but were unable to maintain the advances. Some profit-taking was evident during the afternoon and trading was choppy near the close.

Soybeans lost the most ground, settling near the lows for the day.

The Agriculture Department will release its updated crop production report Friday afternoon. Grain analysts in Chicago expect it to show a record 7.9 billion bushels of corn and 2.04 billion bushels of soybeans.

Last month the USDA predicted a corn crop of 7.7 billion bushels and 2.01 billion bushels of soybeans.

Country movement was slow.

The outside markets were higher.

Costs wipe out autumn tradition

©Universal Press Syndicate

That great American fall tradition — the introduction of new car models — is being wiped out by the brutal realities of new cars that cost what houses did 30 years ago, explosively high interest rates and steep fuel costs.

Dealers won't have to wait until a specified date to put the 1982 car lines on sale.

Detroit's automakers are telling the dealers they can sell their new models as soon as they receive them.

So in the remaining weeks of September and in October, you well may find "bargains" on 1981 models left on dealer lots as the dealers struggle to overcome top-heavy inventories, unrestrained competition, staggering carrying charges and pressure from their manufacturers to take the new '82s no matter what.

What should you do if the car you own has reached the jalopy stage and if an automobile is essential to you for business and personal reasons?

Buy a new model, even though typical model sticker prices are bumping the $10,000 mark, are up more than 6 percent over the '81s and are not drastically changed in style from their larger ancestors? Postpone a decision and "pray"? Buy a used car after an exhaustive shopping tour?

Interest rates (meaning borrowing costs on an auto loan) will not drop soon below General Motors' 13.8 percent subsidy level. New car prices will go nowhere but up as the sizes of the new models go nowhere but down. The background for the decision of millions of you is tough indeed.

But if you make a real effort, there are some answers. Here are two, particularly for a first-time car buyer.

1) Lease-buy a new car and enter into a straightforward "open-end" lease. If your credit is good (imperative) you'll pay only the equivalent of two-to three months' installment loan repayments as a down payment — perhaps $400 to $600. Then you will pay the equivalent of regular monthly installment purchase payments for three or four years, as you would on a regular car purchased on the installment plan.

But at the end of a three-year period, you still won't own the car.

A terrible deal?

Not as bad as you might think. You've paid only $400-$600 "down" (up front). And under the lease, you have the right to buy "your" leased car from the leasing company, at a price specified in advance when you signed the lease. Since you're driving that leased car and you can "baby" it, you have a used-car bargain. Then, assuming interest rates have fallen at last, you can get a loan to buy your own "used" car, over another two- or even three-year span. In effect, you will have engineered a low down-payment, four- to six-year loan for a new '82 car.

Beware the pitfalls, though. Read the contract fine print with utmost care. It's your car, and for the lowest payments, you probably must license, insure and maintain it, just as though you really owned the car. Shop around for models requiring the lowest payments. Estimated resale values on two cars with identical sticker prices may be hundreds of dollars apart.

2) Buy a secondhand car, even if you have traditionally been only a new-car buyer. The used car is still your most economical move in wheels, despite the upward push in used car prices.

Among the forces working against you: fewer new cars have been sold in recent years, so late-model used cars are harder to find. Motorists are keeping their cars longer, reducing the availability of older used autos as well.

But the used car remains a bargain for one reason: car depreciation is "front loaded" — bigger in the early years, lower later on.

Your first 30,000 miles of driving costs you about two-thirds more than your second 30,000; this second, in turn, costs about 20 percent more than your third 30,000 miles. And though maintenance costs rise as mileage increases, they don't go up as fast as other expenses go down.

The bottom line:

The longer you keep the car, the lower your costs per year and per mile. For your pocketbook protection: 1) drive a new car until it becomes well used; or 2) buy a used one in the first place.

Dear Abby

Some brides warm up to cold cash

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY — Your recent article in which you stated that "anyone requesting money instead of a gift is tacky" is from the 19th century!

When my daughter was growing up, every time I found a "good buy" in china or silver or whatever, I bought it for her hope chest. Consequently when she marries, she will have the best of everything for less money. So what's wrong with the couple requesting money instead of a gift? Actually, it would save the guests the trouble of shopping and wrapping a gift that will probably be returned anyway.

Those who come to a wedding are there to celebrate the joy of a union of two people in love, so why saddle them with three toasters and six coffee pots?

If our society has accepted "living together" and brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white, who is to say that asking for money instead of a wedding gift is "tacky"?

— IN THE SAME BOAT

DEAR IN: Hold it! Society has not unanimously accepted a) living together, or b) brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white. And there are many who would rather send a wedding gift than throw money in the pot to help pay for the wedding.

DEAR ABBY — I am a responsible 22-year-old woman living with my parents. I am going away for a month's vacation, and my problem is my parents and my guinea pigs. My parents have told me that the minute I am out the door they are getting rid of my guinea pigs.

I've told them that they won't have to do one thing because I've already made arrangements with a girlfriend to come by every day to feed them and clean their cages.

Abby, they still insist that the guinea pigs are going as soon as I leave. I have explained that the guinea pigs are MY pets and not their property to do with as they please. Also, I said that I think I am old enough to take care of my affairs, but it is obvious that they have no respect for me or my wishes.

If they get rid of my guinea pigs while I'm gone, I will never forgive them. Tell me what you think should be done, and who is right.

— NO RESPECT

DEAR — NO RESPECT: "Miss Piggy's Guide to Life" might be helpful here. I think you're right, but it's your parents' home and their wishes will prevail. If you want to be absolutely certain that you don't lose your pets, ask your girlfriend if she will look after them at HER place. If that's not possible, find some other temporary home for your guinea pigs.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower in my early 70s who has been seeing a widow in her early 60s. We've known each other over 40 years. We both own homes, have savings, and both have children.

I want to pop the question, but I also want a pre-nuptial agreement. Would it be out of line for me to state that when I die, my home and half of my savings will go to my son, and anything my new wife and I acquire together, plus the other half of my savings, will go to her?

A friend of mine had such an agreement and thought it showed a lack of love and trust. My deceased wife and I worked for over 50 years together and we planned on leaving something to our son.

Should the fact that I am remarrying affect those plans? What is your opinion?

PRACTICAL IN TEXAS

DEAR PRACTICAL: Your "agreement" sounds more than fair to me. Your lawyer can advise you. And be sure your bride has an attorney to guide her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C. AND D.: The marriage will work if the dents in HIS head fit the bumps in HERS.

Youth activities are starting

Boys and girls interested in karate should report at 7 p.m. Monday to the mini gym at the YFCA. The mini gym is located just behind the main building. Ed Terrell, instructor, will explain activity and costs involved. This ongoing program will accept new members each Monday during September.

The Judo club begins its 18th season with a signup meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the mini gym at the Y. Wes Dobbs and his students will help get newcomers started.

The YFCA judo club is the Y's oldest continuous program. It meets Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Y throughout the school year. Signup will continue any Tuesday or Thursday until Oct. 15, Dobbs said.

Other activities include flag football, three parent-child programs and classes in tumbling, wrestling and leather tooling.

Rex LeForgee and Rod Rutherford, co-chairmen of the flag football program, said activity will start Sept. 19 with signup at Harmon park, just east of the swimming pool.

First and second graders should come at 1 p.m., third and fourth graders at 2 p.m. and fifth and sixth graders at 3 p.m. Boys will be assigned to a team at that time.

Later in September and in early October other youth programs will begin as the building becomes available for classes and activities, according to Chuck Upton, volunteer youth program committee chairman.

For further information about youth programs call the Y at 733-4384.

It's Time We Lay Our Cards On The Table!
12.61% Annual Yield Effective October 1st.

Beginning October 1, 1981, Twin Falls Bank & Trust will offer a new high yield tax exempt one year certificate of deposit called the All-Savers Certificate. Frankly, it's time we lay our cards on the table about the certificate simply because we feel it's in your best interest. The All-Savers Certificate is a sound and secure investment. However, there are some major investment and tax considerations you should know about.

1. The interest rate earned on the All-Savers Certificate will be the highest allowed by law. Your one year All-Savers Certificate earns interest at the rate of 70% of the average yield on one year U.S. Treasury Bills. The rate fluctuates and is announced monthly. (The rate on October 1st will be 12.61%, with a new rate announced on October 5th.)
2. Minimum deposit of $500.
3. Tax exemption is lost if the certificate is redeemed before the one year maturity.
4. Interest has a lifetime tax exemption; up to $1,000 per individual return and $2,000 if you file jointly.
5. The use of the All-Savers Certificate as collateral for a loan will result in the loss of your tax exemption.
6. Interest will be paid at maturity.
7. The law allows holders of Money Market Certificates with higher rates to convert to the All-Savers Certificate without early withdrawal penalties.
8. Beginning October 1, 1981, your All-Savers Certificate is insured by the FDIC.
9. Federal regulations require an interest penalty for early withdrawal.

The Bank & Trust is concerned that many people may sign up without fully understanding the tax penalties or their own tax situation. So before you make a decision . . . talk to our Customer Service Representative at any office today, we'll make sure you get the savings certificate that's best for you.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need some information on low blood count. My doctor gave me four pints of blood at the hospital. He had every X-ray in the world taken and can't find what caused it to happen. Have you any idea what is happening that causes my blood to disappear? I take iron pills, two a day. The doctor couldn't find any leakage?

I feel weak and am short of breath when this happens. The last time I fell over backwards and didn't even know I was falling. What can I do besides take iron pills?

DEAR READER — You must have had a very severe anemia to require transfusions. Mild anemias may not cause any symptoms but the more severe forms do cause a person to be weak and tired.

That is because there is not enough oxygen being carried by your blood to your cells. The oxygen is essential to metabolize food and release energy from food for your body. The shortness of breath was an indication that your body needed oxygen and your circulation could not supply the need.

Your doctor has a pretty good idea from his tests whether your anemia was caused from bleeding or not. He may also be able to tell if your bone marrow is producing enough red blood cells or if you are just low on iron.

A normal, healthy person's body may produce three million new red blood cells a second. These replace the ones that are destroyed. A normal red blood cell only lives about 120 days.

In some medical conditions the red blood cells are easily destroyed or have a short life span. This condition, loss of blood and decreased production of red blood cells are the general mechanisms involved in anemias discussed in The Health Letter No. 4-2, Understanding the Anemias, that I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Faintness can be a complication of severe anemias and may explain your falling. Your treatment will depend on what caused your anemia. Iron replacement is often necessary if you actually lose blood. Provided there is no further blood loss, the normal body will then gradually regenerate a normal amount of cells.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You say heart attacks are a disease of this century. My contention is that similar diseases carried different names in different eras. My father practiced medicine the first 45 years of this century and I have a recollection back to the early part of this century.

I remember well how shaken my father was when a neighbor suddenly developed severe pain and died very suddenly from "acute indigestion." These conditions occurred rather frequently.

DEAR READER — The first diagnosis of a heart attack in a living subject was in 1908 in Germany. True, heart attacks did occur and were not diagnosed as such. For example, a Chinese woman found in an ancient tomb was found to have had heart disease.

The question you have raised about failure to recognize heart attacks has been considered by experts and the general agreement is that while such cases undoubtedly did occur, they were uncommon compared to the high rate of heart disease today.

Hence we consider the epidemic of heart disease today as a disease of this century.

Varied causes for fatigue of teenagers

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If a teenager says he is often fatigued, a Florida doctor says it's always a signal that something is wrong and should be taken seriously.

Dr. Arnold Melnick said the fatigue may only be caused by inadequate rest and sleep or it may be the result of a disease or drug use. Or there may be a psychological cause such as a conflict with parents or just plain boredom.

Melnick, professor of pediatrics at the Southeastern College of Osteopathic Medicine in North Miami Beach, said in a report in the medical magazine Consultant that if a teenager comes to a doctor complaining he is tired all the time, the doctor is being sent two messages.

"First, 'I think there is something wrong with me, tell me what it is.' Second, 'I'm scared about something, please help me.'"

"We have to pay attention to these hidden messages," Melnick wrote.

He said fatigue caused by inadequate rest, tension, dieting, pregnancy, too little or too much activity is common among adolescents.

"Even though teenagers think they get enough rest, they frequently overextend themselves," he said. "They stay awake to 2 a.m. watching television and then have to get up early for school the next day. Fatigue is a natural consequence."

Melnick said intense or prolonged stress or tension will also cause fatigue. And so will what he calls "stringent fad dieting." Fatigue can be the first indication to an adult that a teenager is pregnant.

Melnick listed 30 diseases that can cause fatigue. He said anemia is probably the most often considered cause of teenage fatigue, but he said youngsters can compensate for mild anemia and the red blood cell count has to be fairly low before symptoms can develop.

Another overdiagnosed condition, he said, is hypothyroidism, a disorder caused by the body's insufficient production of thyroid hormone.

Melnick said teenagers frequently take medications, whether prescribed or not. He said the fatigue they can cause often goes unrecognized. He cited tetracyclines for acne and antihistamines for allergies as examples of drugs which can cause fatigue.

Alcohol, sedatives, tranquilizers, nicotine, insulin, and small overdoses of vitamins A and D also were among the drugs listed as capable of causing fatigue.

Melnick said doctors should suspect a psychologic cause of fatigue if the parent is doing the complaining.

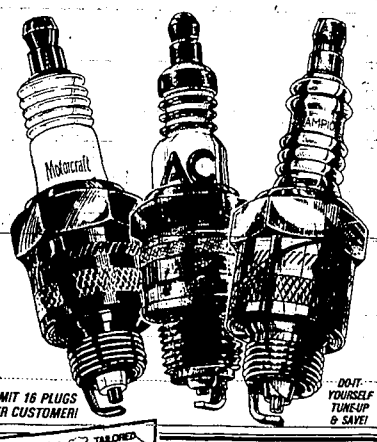

"If a young man is fatigued at home or in school and is active outside, or if a young lady is always tired at home but can manage to go out and dance half the night, suspect psychologic fatigue.

"If the teenager is too tired when it comes to meeting parental requests, such as tidying up, clearing the table, or doing the dishes, but moves quickly for a basketball game or going out with the girls, you have to be suspicious."

Melnick said an adolescent who has psychologic fatigue can take a nap and get up just as tired as when he lay down. But if the problem is caused by an illness, the youngster will feel somewhat improved after a rest.

Fun at the fairgrounds means midway for many

And this year's midway is bigger and better than ever

Joe Stastney steadies grandson Matthew Paley

By LAURY MASHER
Times-News writer

FILER — At 11 a.m., there are few sounds at the fair, but soon it will be illuminated with bright lights and filled with laughing and screaming children whirling on roller coasters, riding tilt-a-whirls, bumper cars and Ferris wheels and sliding on giant slides.

"It's all part of living," says Leo Alexander, a 30-year veteran of the carnival business. "People enjoy the thrills and excitement."

Ball-toss operator Rolland Meaker says the opportunity to do something out of the ordinary entices people to ride the rides even though they know it may make them sick.

"I've seen people go on the skydiver six or seven times and come out green, but then they'll take a rest and go back and do it again."

Fair worker Terry Essex thinks bumper cars are a favorite for children because they give them an opportunity to drive.

"They can't drive a car in the street, but any kid can ride a bumper car," she says.

Another popular ride is the "Konkord Castle," a plastic-covered canvas filled with air, puffed by a generator, that runs continuously.

The Konkord Castle ride operator says he has had as many as 500 children jumping on the huge air balloon each day.

Rides, however, are not the most enjoyable part of the fair for everyone. Jason Rose of Buhl says he enjoys playing games the most because he likes to win things.

"I'd say it's about 50-50," Alexander says. "Some kids like the rides, but others like the games of chance because they offer them a challenge and an opportunity to win things."

Twelve-year-old Jennifer Horst of Buhl says her favorite part of the fair is the fun house because she likes to be scared.

"It's hard to tell where you're going because of all the mirrors," Horst says. "You have to feel your way around, and sometimes you're scared you're not going to find your way out. I ran into the walls twice."

Alexander says that in all the years he has worked with the carnival he has never considered taking another job because he likes to make people happy.

Brand Thresher winds her way through a hall of mirrors

At night the amusement ride's lights transform the midway into a neon world of rotating, twirling and spinning UFOs

Hollywood Q & A

I watched a recent "Lou Grant" show, and the woman publisher supposedly had a stroke. She played her part so well that I wonder if she really was ill. If not, how did she learn that part so well? — Linda Artmann, Milwaukee

Nancy Marchand, who plays Mrs. Pynchon, the lady publisher, is a great actress, and she was in the best of health when she played that part. She has turned in many equally spectacular performances, and those lucky enough to have seen her in "Morning's at Seven" on Broadway can testify to her expert handling of the role of a frustrated housewife.

Did Greg Harrison take it all off when he did a strip in the TV movie "For Ladies Only"? And did they cut out certain parts because of TV censors? — T.L., Trenton, N.J.

No, ma'am. Harrison, who plays Gonzo in the "Trapper John" series as well, is making his first major outing in the comedy about male strippers. It co-stars Patti Davis, daughter of President Reagan, and nobody wanted to go too far, for fear of flirting with bad taste.

What's happened to Jack Lord? Since "Hawaii Five-O" left TV, his fans are suffering withdrawal pains. Is he going to be appearing on any TV shows or movies? — M.R., Milwaukee

Lord is living the life of leisure in Hawaii. He has tons of offers to do movies and guest shots on all kinds of programs, but Lord would like to enjoy some of that Hawaiian surf and sun for a change. It's a dramatic change of scenery for an actor born and raised in New York City. But watch for more reruns of the popular series. He'll be back. Just keep tuned in.

Whatever became of John Kennedy's speechwriter, Ted Sorensen? He wanted to run for the Senate, I think. He seemed to disappear. — K.L., Wichita Falls, Texas.

Sorensen is alive and well and doing handsomely as a lawyer in a big Park Avenue firm in New York City. Weekends he and wife Gillian dash off to their Connecticut retreat. He did run for the Senate in New York back in 1970, but he has shied from politics since he was defeated in the Democratic primary and is now deep into international law. Sorensen was more than a speechwriter for President Kennedy and was said to be Kennedy's ghostwriter, responsible for much of what the late president wrote. But to this day, Sorensen denies he was the author of anything credited to JFK.

Local control may be threatened

Congress, courts tackle cable issues

By CURT MATTHEWS
©1981 The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — As officials in communities across the nation make decisions that will define their municipalities' relationships with cable television, dark legal clouds are gathering on that industry's horizon.

In Congress, legislation is close to passage that would curtail the authority of a city to regulate the rates that cable networks charge their subscribers. For a city to exercise such authority, "would be inconsistent with. . .deregulatory objectives," according to a report approved in July by the Senate Commerce Committee.

In the Supreme Court, the justices will hear argument soon in a case from Boulder, Colo., that raises questions about the right of a city to create a "monopoly" by granting a franchise that allows a single company to serve the city's residents. The question to be answered is whether such monopolies violate federal antitrust laws.

And beyond the legal controversies rooted in the economics of cable television lies a more philosophical debate: Does a cable television network — as a new medium of communications — warrant the same First Amendment protections claimed by newspapers, magazines and broadcasters?

In 1979, the Supreme Court ruled that the Federal Communications Commission lacked the authority to regulate cable television as a "common carrier" — a ruling that left to state and local governments the role of regulating one of the fastest growing segments of the communications industry.

The court's ruling opened the way for rapid and largely unfettered growth; more than 4,000 cable systems now serve nearly 20 million subscribers. The revenues generated by the new industry are expected to top $2.5 billion this year and more than $5 billion by 1985.

The legislation to curb local government control of cable television is part of a much larger bill — the Telecommunications Competition and Deregulation Act of 1981 — that is intended to be a comprehensive overhaul of the Communications Act of 1934. The bill has been before Congress, in one form or another, for several years and is an attempt to come to grips with the many innovations in communications technology that have appeared in recent years.

When the legislation was approved July 8 by the Senate Commerce Committee, the provisions barring local governments from setting cable tv rates were viewed by many city officials as a sneaky victory for the cable industry.

Representatives of local government organizations complained that the committee acted without holding hearings and with little public debate regarding cable television.

However, a spokesman for the committee insists that the committee acted openly and with full notice to interested parties. He pointed out that extensive hearings were held in 1977 and that the issues were open for debate at all times since then.

Sources close to the committee say they hope to have the bill brought before the full senate later this month and predict, "there is no question the legislation will pass."

The bill has been strongly supported by representatives of the cable television industry as a necessary precaution against local government interference with the growth of the industry.

In recent months, industry spokesman have argued that the Reagan administration's tight budget policies may prompt some local governments to attempt to replace lost federal funds by imposing excessively high viewer rates and franchise fees for cable television.

The strongest opposition to the cable TV provisions of the bill has come from the National League of Cities, a lobby group in Washington that represents nearly 15,000 cities and towns. The position taken by the League is that cable television is a local service that should be controlled at the local level.

The regulatory questions relating to economics may prove much easier to resolve than those dealing with cable tv programming. Cable TV serves only those who have paid to receive it in the privacy of their homes.

To what extent does the First Amendment cover such questions as what may be offered to the subscribers? If some "censorship" is called for, who will be the censor? If censorship is unconstitutional, what prevents the lowest forms of pornography from being marketed directly into virtually every home in a given community?

These are questions that have yet to be addressed very broadly in the courts but are surely to arise with greater frequency as the cable industry moves toward maturity.

CBS tops in Neilsens

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS maintained its customary position atop the Nielsen ratings for the week ending Sept. 6, but only by three-tenths of a point, and its nearest competitor was not ABC, but traditional underdog NBC.

The score was CBS, 14.5 with an audience share of 26.5; NBC, 14.2 and 25.8; and ABC, 13.5 and 24.8.

The CBS "Evening News" clung to the lead by an even more slender margin — 11.2 and 21 over 11.1 and 21 for ABC's "World News Tonight." NBC's "Nightly News" was a distant 9.7 and 21.

The top programs for the week ending Sept. 6, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co. were:

1. M-A-S-H (CBS).
2. Three's Company (ABC).
3. House Calls (CBS).
4. Dukes of Hazzard (CBS).
5. Too Close for Comfort (ABC).
6. Diff'rent Strokes (NBC).
7. Facts of Life (NBC).
8. Laverne and Shirley (ABC).
9. Hart to Hart (ABC).
10. NBC Monday Night Movie (NBC).

Translator cancels KAID

TWIN FALLS — An engineer for Boise-based television station KAID said Thursday he hoped within a day or two to repair a malfunctioning translator serving the Magic Valley.

Viewers in the Jerome and Twin Falls areas who are not connected to a TV cable normally receive the Idaho public television station on Channel 13. The station went off the air locally last Friday.

Jim Allen, field engineer for Idaho public television, said that he had not inspected the damage yet, but he hoped to be able to complete the repairs quickly. The translator is situated near the KMVT transmitter four miles east of Jerome.

New contract means more money, fewer bosses

Barbara Walters sticking it out with ABC

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK — Barbara Walters will have fewer bosses, more money and a lot more time in the next five years. That was the price of keeping her on the ABC News team, and News President Roone Arledge paid it jubilantly.

"We are delighted that Barbara Walters will continue to be part of ABC News," he said in announcing a new five-year contract with the first lady of the television interview. "Her interviews and reporting are unique in our industry."

He almost was not delighted, because he almost lost her.

Miss Walters, who frequently found herself working simultaneously for half-a-dozen producers on half-a-dozen projects under the old pact, said a less frenetic lifestyle was a central demand in drawing up the new one. At least one other network proved an ardent and tempting suitor.

"There were weeks when I was spinning too fast to find myself," she said. "What I wanted to do was to put all my eggs in one basket — to centralize."

The "basket" will be ABC's up-and-coming news magazine, "20-20."

Arledge said from now on, Miss Walters will do most of her work for "20-20," in tandem with host and old friend Hugh Downs. She said she will continue to do her Nielsen-winning "Specials," and to cover such special events as the royal wedding and the inauguration, but someone else will have to handle the rest of the chores that have been hers.

"Yes, I had other offers," she said. "I had hoped it would work out that I would stay at ABC. I'm happy here. I think it's the place to be. It's exciting. It's growing and everybody is a bit hungry.

"There was one point where the other offer was so attractive that I did get serious about going to another network."

Salary doubtless tipped the balance, but on that point she was less candid.

When Miss Walters first came aboard at ABC in 1976 after a stint on NBC's "Today Show," she reportedly did so for $1 million a year. The ante was higher this time.

"I won't give you the figure, but it is more than the last contract," she said. "I knew people were going to ask me that and I wasn't sure how I should answer it. I told Dick Wald (ABC senior vice president), 'I'm damned if I do and I'm damned if I don't,' and he said, 'tell them the truth and tell them to consider the cost of living.' "

But money, she said, was not the first consideration.

"It was a question of weighing and measuring and saying, 'where would I be happiest?'" she said. "I wanted five satisfactory years. I didn't care so much about setting new records and climbing new heights.

"Also I didn't want to negotiate this new contract in the press as happened five years ago. We met in very private places. . .very often in my apartment."

Miss Walters said the "Specials" she will do henceforth will be more politically oriented than in the past — more along the lines of the exclusive she obtained for "20-20" with ex-yippie Abbie Hoffman before he surfaced and surrendered on an old drug charge.

"They will be more news oriented," she said.

By TOM SHALES
©1981 The Washington Post Co.

WASHINGTON — In Hollywood, the perk capital of the world, it isn't enough to have a parking space with you name on it, the head table at an overpriced French restaurant or a key to the executive Jacuzzi.

No. By contract, they also have to give you an Emmy. Or so it often seems.

All the people who work in television and who reach a certain level of status and renown, or just income, expect to get some Emmy awards to show for it, and an enormous number of them do. That's part of what the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences is there for. To make sure everbody gets at least one Emmy, so that they can be known as "the Emmy-winning" so-and-so.

Then a network can advertise a program saying, "And now the Emmy-winning story by an Emmy-winning director who is paying child support to an Emmy-winning actress who ran off with her Emmy-winning costume designer."

The year CBS is the Emmy-winning network, its number having come up as host for the Emmy telecast, scheduled for Sunday night — from here to eternity. Last year, as you may recall, the 32nd annual Emmy Awards ceremony was boycotted by almost every actor in Hollywood as part of the actors' strike, and the only one who showed up to accept his trophy was puffy Powers Boothe, star of the sleazy and loatesome CBS movie on the Guyana tradegey.

As a result of Booth's career indiscretion, there is one thing to be grateful to the Emmy Awards for: neither hide nor hair of Powers Boothe have been seen since. On television, anyway.

United Press International headlined an advance story on the Emmy show last year, "Due to Actors' Strike, Emmy Awards May Be Very, Very Dull." Due to the actors' strike? What was the excuse the preceding 31 years?

Steve Allen probably should have grabbed an Emmy last year for his spendid service on behalf of keeping the show afloat, which he did with the able assistance of Dick Clark. Allen's first words were, "Good evening — we'll see about that, I suppose." Amazingly enough, even with the actors boycotting and the show encumbered with such lackluster celeb presenters as NBC's L.A. lollipop Kelly Lange, it still managed to run more than half an hour overtime.

So that some time after midnight Allen could be heard announcing from the podium, "For all you hostages in the audience now in the third hour of your capture" and "Now as we enter the third day of our telethon, ladies and gentlemen. . . ." It was a tribute to something not very laudable that a non-show plagued with no-shows could be turned into a three-hour un-show.

As regularly as the Academy doles out Emmy awards, it valiantly attempts to remodel the ceremony and make it a more platable, or at least tolerable, television program. This year, the Board of Governors, surely at the risk of life and limb, proposed reducing the number of awards handed out on the air. This of course was greeted in the "creative community" as warmly as if the government had outlawed hair weaving, face lifting and Perrier.

Sheepishly, and faced with threats of boycott from directors and writers, the Academy announced in July that it had reconsidered its revolutionary proposal and that the number of awards given on the air would be pushed back up. One small step backward for Academy, one great leap backward for viewers.

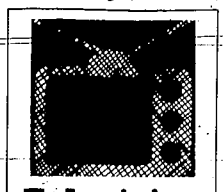

Certainly any individual who manages to do superior work in a medium like television, where mediocrity can earn a person millions, would not be begrudged a big gold trinket and public acknowledgement of his or her excellence. But the Emmy awards will remain a joke until proportions and the Emmy telecast itself becomes a representation of the best that television can be and the best that television can do.

It would also help, of course, if television in general were a lot better, and therefore, more justifiable in giving itself prizes. This year, there are so few regularly scheduled drama shows on TV than every one of them was nominated as Best Dramatic Series. That says more about the state of television than all the Emmy Awards put together and melted down, which may not be a bad idea.

As it is now, with awards going to everyone but the valet parkers in front of the auditorium, the Emmy Awards unfortunely come off as the Boob Tube Booby Prizes than as something to cheer about.

Viewer ratings rarely match Academy's awards

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

A program can win the ratings and not the coveted statuette.

The difference is epitomized in three shows — "Hill Street Blues," "Three's Company" and "Too Close For Comfort."

"Hill Street Blues," which captured an all-time Emmy Award high of 21 nominations, is scheduled opposite two situation comedies that all but demolished the cop show in the ratings war.

"Three's Company" was No. 2 in the ratings this week and "Too Close For Comfort" scored fifth place. Yet neither won any nominations.

"Lou Grant," the second most honored dramatic series, won 13 Emmy nominations but rarely reached the rarified top 20 in the Nielsen ratings.

The popular newspaper drama and "Hill Street Blues" will meet head-on for Emmy honors in eight categories, including some double nominees. For instance, both shows have two nominees among best writing for a drama series.

Competing with these popular shows in the contest for best drama series of the year will be "Dallas," "Quincy" and the defunct "White Shadow."

Also high in the esteem of academy members were the two runaway favorites among mini-series during the 1980-81 series, "Shogun," a saga of medieval Japan from James Clavell's novel, and "Masada," an epic of Biblical era Jews fighting a losing battle against the might of Rome.

"Shogun" won 14 nominations, "Masada," 15. The shows were pitted against one another in almost every category for limited series. Less popular with academy members in the mini-series category were "John Steinbeck's East of Eden," "The Bunker," "Rumpole of the Bailey" and the spy thriller "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy."

Inevitably, lots of nominations each year go to shows or people in shows which have been canceled.

Nominated as one of the outstanding comedy series was "Soap." Richard Mulligan of that show was named for outstanding lead actor. And the two Kates — Cathryn Damon and Katherine Helmond were put up for the best lead actress. "Soap," of course, has gone down the drain.

Then there is "The White Shadow." It was nominated for outstanding drama series. And it picked up another nomination along the way. Canceled.

There were multiple nominations for several other series that were pink-slipped by the networks — "Palmerstown," "American Dream," "Breaking Away," "Nero Wolfe" and "The Gangster Chronicles" (Ugh!) among them.

An exception to the Academy-viewer disparity are the highly rated series "M-A-S-H" and "Taxi."

Both situation comedies enjoy high ratings and have been nominated for nine Emmys each.

Competing with "M-A-S-H" and "Taxi" for best comedy series of the year are "Barney Miller," "Soap" and "WKRP" in Cincinnati.

While Emmy nominations and awards often fail to reflect popular taste, CBS, which led the ratings race among the networks for most of the year, won the most nominations — 104 — followed by NBC with 92 and ABC with 79.

PBS accounted for 32 nominations. Syndicated shows won only 7.

In all, 27 awards will be presented Sunday at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium in the nationally telecast (CBS) two-hour open-ended Emmy ceremonies at 8 p.m. (EDT).

Ed Asner and Shirley MacLaine will co-host the show in which Elton Rule, president of ABC, will be presented the Governor's Award.

By JERRY KRUPNICK
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — The problem with the Emmy nominations is always who and what were left out.

The official list of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences runs to 64 pages this year. One would think that would be more than enough to give the nod to every deserving performer and show offered by television in the past season.

But nooooooooooo.

As usual, there are baffling errors of omission.

Where, for instance, is Alec Guinness? Guinness was the quintessential British spy in "Tinker Tailor, Soldier, Spy," the Public Broadcasting Service six-part adaptation of John Le Carre's fine novel.

"Tinker, Tailor. . ." was nominated as one of the year's outstanding multi-dramas. But Guinness was ignored as best actor. So too was Ian Richardson, who was marvelously smarmy as one of the suspects in "Tinker, Tailor. . ." and deserved a best supporing actor nomination.

And then there is the case of Jane Seymour. She was incredible last season as the vicious vixen in "East of Eden." Once again, the multi-drama was nominated, but not Seymour.

We don't find much fault with the multi-drama nominations: "Shogun," "Masada" and "Rumpole of the Bailey" deserve to be there alongside "East of Eden" and "Tinker, Tailor. . ."

But certainly Kate Nelligan as "Therese Raquin" deserved some recognition. And so did John Hurt as Raskolnikov in "Crime and Punishment."

And how could no one mention Brad Davis' super performance as the disillusioned Marine in "A Rumor of War?"

Before we would nominate Ellen Burstyn (a superb actress in a badly flawed role) for her portrayal of Jean Harris, we would have named Farrah Fawcett (you hear us) for her standout job as the victim in "Murder in Texas." We probably would have thrown in Faye Dunaway for her "Evita Peron" as well.

'The Keep' a top-notch thriller by physician-turned-writer

By United Press International

The Keep
by F. Paul Wilson (Morrow, $12.95)

You can add the name of F. Paul Wilson to the list of spellbinding fiction writers.

Wilson, a New Jersey physician, can put away his little black bag and forget about making house calls if he continues to write blood-curdling novels, such as "The Keep."

He handles plots and subplots with the same skill as Jack Higgins and Clive Cussler but glues them together with a substance borrowed from Edgar Allan Poe.

Wilson acknowledges his debt to H.P. Lovecraft, Robert E. Howard and Clark Ashton Smith — all masters of the weird tale — and in "The Keep" he shows the influence of Bram Stoker.

Once the reader gets into the keep, a small castle fortress that becomes a deadly place for villainous Nazi soldiers during World War II, he can start looking for Bela Lugosi to pop out of the shadows.

There's a vampire, or some sort of blood-sucking, throat-slashing being from another time (Clark Ashton Smith) on the loose in the icy-cold (Lovecraft) innards of the mysterious fortress in the Transylvania mountains of Romania.

There are a lot of bad guys in the keep, especially a no-good SS major who is trying to get a plush assignment in [illegible] as but there are a few good people there, too, one of them being a professional German soldier who hates the Nazis and keeps the SS major from murdering innocent villagers.

There are a crippled Jewish professor, the only man who can solve the mystery of the keep, and his beautiful daughter who becomes the love target of the lustful Nazi soldiers even though they are anti-Semitic.

And there is a strange red-haired traveler named Glaeken who is a question mark during most of the novel.

Wilson avoids such Lovecraftian adjectives as eldritch, squamous and rugose, and the high-flown descriptions of Clark Ashton Smith, without losing the chilling or outre atmosphere generated by each.

"The Keep" should not be read in a graveyard at midnight by flickering candlelight.

The Queen from Provence
by Jean Plaidy (Putnam, $11.95)

Jean Plaidy specializes in historical novels that blend action and [illegible] turies and her latest — "The Queen from Provence" — won't disappoint the author's many fans.

Based on the life of Queen Eleanor, the second daughter of the Count of Provence, and Henry III of England, this sixth book in Miss Plaidy's Plantagenet Saga focuses on their married life and reign.

The book begins in the Court of Provence and outlines the subtleties of negotiating royal marriages. It shows Henry as a weak king, who was easily manipulated by Eleanor, but the theme is explored only briefly.

In fact, the only problem with this novel is that too much history is condensed into too few pages.

In many places, the novel lacks detail. Years are lost in the travels of the royal court and armies, back and forth to Europe.

It might have been of more benefit to the reader if Miss Plaidy had concentrated on only part of Eleanor and Henry's life together, rather than trying to condense all of the drama and turbulence contained in their story.

Even the origins of England's Parliament, which was formed during Henry's reign, are glossed over without the in-depth writing the period deserves. Nevertheless, for those who want a compelling story, told in Miss Plaidy's unmistakable style, this book fills the bill.

Cable Harbor
by Donald Bowie
(M. Evans and Company, Inc., $11.95)

Love, sex, murder and sand. Donald Bowie's latest novel, "Cable Harbor," has it all — plus witty dialogue. All set in a small resort town on the coast of Maine.

"Cable Harbor" follows the antics of a crazy-quilt set of characters.

There's Arthur and Herbert — Cable Harbor's resident gay couple and the happiest marriage in town. Marjorie, wife of a local caterer and ardent crusader against the "corrupt" summer people. And Laura, one of the "summer people" and currently unemployed.

Things are generally quiet in Cable Harbor until the local residents, fed up with the summer folks, declare open warfare. Then the whole town is up for grabs. (There's even a scene involving a local radio talk show discussion on whether UFO's are learning about America by listening to the radio.)

"Cable Harbor" is enjoyable reading, and a perfect book to take along to the beach.

Collins a sharp, sexy novelist

By PETER COSTA
United Press International

British author Jackie Collins is a tall, handsome woman with mischievous green eyes and a talent for writing outrageous sex and violence.

She has been called the Harold Robbins of England and seems to love-hate the comparison.

"I do not write hardcore pornography. There is no explicit sex in my book. There are love scenes but they aren't explicit. It's good, clean, fun sex. Sure, one of the main characters is a hooker," she said, her British accent forging an "ah" as in, "hookah."

Her views on men mirror her fiction: the powerful are the most sexy and the most sexy are always the ones with power.

"Women who have read my book fall in love with the main character, Gino. And that's because women are always attracted to bastards. Ask them, 'Hey, how about coming over and having a date with my friend, he's a really nice guy,' and they refuse. But say, 'Listen, he's fun but a real bastard,' and they're over in a minute. They think, this is the one they will change," she said.

Ms. Collins, in her thirties, has been married for 15 years, has two children and lives half the year in London, the other half in Los Angeles.

In New York promoting her new book, "Chances," published by Warner Books, she looks for all the world like a stormy soap opera actress. She says many resent her for her movie star looks and her writing talent. "They don't think a woman who looks like me could write a novel," she said.

"Chances," is the No. 2 best-seller in England and is doing well in America.

"It's doing well here because people are fascinated with the characters and the gangster era of the 1920s. But 'Chances' isn't a bodice-ripper. I could never write one of those. I write what I myself would want to read," she said.

Asked if she likes the jet set life, she said: "Yes, I'm fabulously overtravelling. I spend a lot of time observing the rich and the beautiful in Hollywood and intend to write my next book about Hollywood wives," she said.

Mother Jones tops journalistic giants again

Article blasts space experiments

By JAMES WARREN
1981 Chicago Sun-Times

Evil is not always born from evil. The most horrid acts can result from worthy aims and, September Mother Jones reveals, not even our cherished space program has been immune.

The muckraking monthly discloses that at least 89 cancer patients were exposed to heavy radiation between 1960 and 1974 in what began as legitimate research but evolved into snooping for the space folks.

Humans became guinea pigs in an experiment to glean how much radiation an astronaut could withstand before getting sick. Reporter Howard Rosenberg focuses on a 6-year-old boy, Dwayne Sexton, who suffered from acute lymphatic leukemia and argues that his parents were misled into believing a dubious medical procedure could save him. When that failed, he was given heavy radiation.

The tinkering took place at the Institute of Nuclear Studies in Oak Ridge, Tenn. The cancer specialist in charge of the suspect experiments, Clarence Lushbaugh, denies the magazine's charge but admits the institute got $3 million or $4 million from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Substantial documentation, Rosenberg holds, further makes the link.

This piece again raises a curious journalistic phenomenon. Why does a small, underfunded monthly continually break significant national stories? Why didn't the "establishment" press, with far greater resources, track tales like the Ford Pinto's precarious gas tank, as well as monstrous "dumping" of unsafe products overseas by U.S. firms and corruption in the laborers union?

Editor Adam Hochschild squarely addresses the issue: "Sometimes when we break a newsmaking story like this, people congratulate us, as if we had won a ballgame or beaten out the competition. They have it all wrong. Sadly, there is no competition to do this type of story.

"There are more than 1,000 correspondents in Washington, D.C., falling all over each other trying to 'develop sources' in the White House," he says. He says that about 12,000 journalists covered the political conventions last year, though the results were known in advance. But, alas, "Rosenberg ran into no other reporters at the scene of the crime he describes."

Magazines

Nation (Sept. 5). Three Washington lawyers received national attention May 20 when a federal court awarded them $10.6 million in fees for winning a $105 million award for the Sioux Nation as compensation for the government's 1877 seizure of the Black Hills. Here Petra Shattuck explores a little-mentioned fact: The largest Sioux tribe has accused the trio of misconduct and asked that fees be withheld. The tribe feels it has been sold out since it wanted the land far more than the money. That seemingly hefty compensation, it contends, merely legitimizes the seizure of the land.

Science (October). "Dull-witted, stoop-shouldered lummoxes." Most state policemen? Your landlord? No, it's the traditional image of the Neanderthal Man, our evolutionary ancestor. Now, Boyce Rensberger reports, the image is being reversed as scientists see the old guy as erect, peaceable and socially cooperative. You can blame the bad image on a French anthropologist, Marcellin Boule, who in 1913 declared him bull-necked and slouching. Alas, books are finally altering their representations and, even if he's not Robert Redford, Neanderthal Man is essentially getting a shower, shave and a better shake.

'S.O.B.' is masterpiece

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

Movies

The late Robert Benchley once innocently claimed that the initials S.O.B. stood for "sweet old Bob." They mean something rather bawdier — "standard operational bull" is a printable version — in Blake Edwards' brilliant black comedy about Hollywood, "S.O.B."

It's the funniest movie since last summer's "Airplane!" — although on a much deeper level — and the most acerbic look at Hollywood folkways since Billy Wilder's "Sunset Boulevard" of three decades ago.

By turns exuberant, satiric, ribald, macabre, elegant, tasteless and rather moving, its comic energy never flags. It is the hilarious masterpiece of the man who gave us the Pink Panther movies and "10."

Like all true masterpieces, "S.O.B." comes from deep within its creator's personal experience and obsessions. A third-generation Hollywoodite, Edwards had directed such highly acclaimed films as "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "Days of Wine and Roses" when the boom fell on him a decade ago with two appalling flops — "Darling Lili" and "Wild Rovers."

Claiming the pictures were sabotaged by his studio, Edwards gets his sweet revenge in "S.O.B.," a grudge he's been nursing for at least the last seven years.

His frazzled, neurotic hero is producer Felix Farmer (Richard Mulligan, the Burt of television's "Soap"). Felix is married to Sally Miles (Julie Andrews, Edwards' real-life wife), a superstar whose antiseptic image has made her "America's G-rated darling."

A successful career as producer of one hit after another has given Felix a luxurious Malibu beachhouse, several cars and a Chinese chef. All this is threatened by his latest effort, "Night Wind," a disaster of "Heaven's Gate" dimensions.

Suicide is the only way out, and Felix goes about committing it as doggedly and unsuccessfully as his movie tried to find an audience. At an orgy given in his own house — presumably to cheer him up — he gets a brainwave: re-shoot and re-cut "Night Wind" as a porn flick, and all will be saved.

Helping him in this noble enterprise are his hardened old director, Tim Culley (William Holden), and his easygoing personal physician (Robert Preston, who practically steals the movie). He's Hollywood's favorite medic because his personal interpretation of the Hippocratic oath is to prescribe for everybody all the pills and shots their corrupt little hearts could desire.

But the man Felix must deal with is the supremely slimy and inept executive vice president in charge of Worldwide Production, David Blackman (Robert Vaughn), who is more consistent about making flops and cutting throats than he is in his sexual orientation. Blackman is the sort of creep who actually revels in delivering the classic Hollywood threat: "You'll never get to work in this town again."

Among the yes-men, hangers-on, flacks and phonies Felix must endure are hefty agent Eva Brown (Shelly Winters) and vicious gossip columnist Polly Reed (Loretta Swit, Hot Lips of "M-A-S-H").

In fact "S.O.B." is jammed to bursting with acutely observed Hollywood flora and fauna, right down to a bogus guru (Larry Storch) who gives the most hilarious funeral oration since Allan King's in "Bye Bye Braverman," and a wildly unethical husband-and-wife team of funeral directors whose glib motto is "Enter with Integrity."

The only truly moral man in "S.O.B." is a derelict old actor who drops dead while jogging on the beach early in the film. He is mourned only by a stray dog.

Drugging his professionally virginal wife to do a nude scene for the pornographic new version of "Night Wind," Felix succeeds in creating a hit from a flop, at which point the studio wants back in.

How they get their way, and how Felix's few genuine friends rally round the now-berserk producer to give him an appropriate Viking send-off, form the rip-roaring conclusion to this bittersweet love-hate poem to Hollywood.

Figuring out who the originals are for the characters in "S.O.B." may provide delicious gossip for those in the know.

But the movie is far more than a sour, vengeful in-joke. Hollywood is merely a microcosm for the whole of a corrupt society, which Edwards gleefully takes apart with genuine moral passion and surgical skill rather than gossip-column puritanism.

Anybody who has kept his eyes open at all in this world will understand what he's talking about, and will only wonder that any movies ever get made, let alone one so triumphantly funny as this one.

What's what

To make the punishment fit the crime, that can be difficult. Judges sentence convicted litterers to clean up trash, vandals to paint park benches, speeders to attend driving classes. But not all creative sentences work. Years ago, a woman was charged with indecent exposure, when such charges were commonplace because of revealing clothing. The judge sentenced her to stand outside on the street with a sign: "I am a wanton hussy." Within hours, she received so many intriguing invitations from courthouse characters that the judge rescinded the sentence and turned her loose.

'DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP'

Major Benjamin Russell was the editor of a newspaper called the Boston Sentinel. Some historical footnotes quote his daughter as insisting it was he and no other who invented the widely reported command alleged to be the last uttered by Captain James Lawrence of the frigate Chesapeake: "Don't give up the ship!"

SENSE OF HUMOR

Which sex tends to have the better sense of humor, the male or the female? Studies at Wesley and Smith colleges once wound up with the conclusion: "The tendency of men to laugh at anything labeled 'joke' strongly suggests that their sense of humor is less well developed and discriminating than that of women."

The moon is moving toward its full phase.

The morning star is Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Virgo.

American short-story writer O. Henry was born Sept. 11, 1862.

On this date in history:

In 1777, troops of Gen. George Washington were badly defeated by the British in the Battle of Brandywine.

In 1841, all members of President John Tyler's Cabinet resigned except Secretary of State Daniel Webster. They were protesting the veto of a banking bill.

In 1963, all 81 people aboard an Indian Airlines Viscount died when the plane crashed near New Delhi.

In 1973, the regime of Socialist Salvador Allende of Chile was toppled in a military coup in which he died, reportedly by his own hand.

Gossip

Q. I couldn't believe it when I heard that wonderful actress Meryl Streep is going to be in a movie called "Stab." How did she get involved in what sounds like another in a long line of cheap exploitation films? — D.O.

A. Although the movie's title may give that impression, I can assure you that "Stab" will be a complex look at a female Jack the Ripper, a complete change of pace from the ostracized, haunting character she plays in the soon-due "The French Lieutenant's Woman." Robert Benton directed "Stab," his first outing since guiding Streep, Dustin Hoffman and himself to Oscars for "Kramer vs. Kramer."

Q. How do Eddie Fisher's other ex-wives, Elizabeth Taylor and Connie Stevens, feel about the forthcoming Fisher autobiography? — E.H.

A. Liz Taylor steadfastly refuses to comment about Eddie's long anticipated book, "My Life, My Loves." Reportedly, their divorce settlement included a clause expressly forbidding his writing about their marriage. Stevens is being much more cooperative, even sending along favored pictures of their children for inclusion in a family picture section in the tome. But, Stevens adds, Fisher had better watch his step since she has plans for a book of her own in the not-too-distant future.

Q. I've heard that the members of the old "Saturday Night Live" gang are all trying to change their off-the-wall images. Aren't they afraid of losing their following? — M. McP.

A. It's true that since plunging into films the old cast of that groundbreaking show consider themselves "actors" rather than sketch comics, and feel they have to stretch their talents and their screen personas if they want to make it in movies. Jane Curtin, for instance, had landed a serious role in the TV movie "Divorce Wars," and also is rehearsing for her first Broadway show, "Candida," with Joanne Woodward. In "Neighbors," John Belushi trades in his Samurai sword to play a suburban homeowner, and Chevy Chase has promised he won't do even one of his patented pratfalls in his new comedy "Modern Problems." And, of course, Gilda Radner recently went the legit route in Jean Kerr's Broadway play "Lunch Hour."

Q. What's happened to Mary Tyler Moore? She hasn't been in the public eye in some time. — J.H.

A. While it's true Mary hasn't worked in movies since "Ordinary People," she tells me it's not for lack of desire but lack of what she considers the right property. Now, Mary has hit on a number of interesting film projects and she hopes to make as many as she can. One is "Finnegan Begin Again," the story of a woman in love with an older man; another is "Prisoners," about a housewife who falls for a prisoner. Mary's also considering a stage role in Bernard Slade's "Special Occasions," plus two other movie projects. Not being a prisoner of her past — the tragic loss of her son and her divorce from Grant Tinker — Mary is busying herself again in making movies.

Q: After winning the Oscar for his role in "The Goodbye Girl," Richard Dreyfuss seemed to disappear from the scene, making only two easily forgettable films since. What's happened? — K.C.

A: Dreyfuss, realizing his last two films, "The Big Fix" and "The Competition," have been less than critical and commercial blockbusters, fought to land the role in the film version of the Broadway hit "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" He plays a man who has been paralyzed from the neck down and fights for the right to die. To get ready for the part, which, insiders are saying, is sure to land him another Oscar nomination, Dreyfuss appeared in a special two-week presentation of the stage play directed by John Badham, who did the screen version as well.

KENNEDY MEMORABILIA: It's well known by now that the late President John Kennedy was quite a lady's man. I just heard a new story which reinforces those tales of Jack's magnetic charm. While he was visiting the West Coast some years ago, a famous actress had herself boxed into a big wooden case nude and had the crate delivered to the house Jack was using during his stay.

Q. Is it true that Susan Sarandon and that talented and good-looking actor Christopher Walken are conducting a hot off-screen romance? — M.V.

A. Walken and Sarandon are not romantically linked, although an outsider might have thought otherwise judging by their behavior together during a production break in "Who Am I This Time?", a movie they're making for television. My Chicago spy saw the two — Walken in an undershirt and pants, Sarandon in a revealing slip — fondle and embrace each other steamily on the Evanston, Ill., movie location. The movie cameras weren't rolling but a still one was. It was manned by a photographer for the benefit of Time and People magazines, which are mulling photo layouts featuring the two stars.

TOP MONEY: Apparently Walter Cronkite's anchorman retirement hasn't tarnished his popularity in the least. At a recent fund-raiser in Martha's Vineyard the top bid of $1,300 went for the privilege of going for a sail with Walter. Last year the high bid for the same sail was $1,060. So not only isn't Cronkite's popularity diminishing, the price for the pleasure of his company has gone up 24 percent. The next highest bid, $1,000, was for having cocktails with Lillian Hellman, who also lives on the Vineyard. A surprise bidder was Mrs. Edward Bennett Williams, who offered $400 for a 30-minute, undisturbed talk with Edward Bennett Williams. Mrs. W. explained that she outbid everyone else for the talk because she hadn't spent much time with her husband, who owns the Baltimore Orioles. The auction was held for the benefit of the Martha's Vineyard Community Services and raised more than $15,000.

NEIGHBORHOOD WATCH

HOW TO PROTECT YOUR HOME

"People are not aware that crime happens in Twin Falls," says Officer Mick Turner, who heads the Crime Prevention Division of the City's Police Department.

But it does. And it's become more frequent.

In 1980, 600 burglaries took place in Twin Falls, according to police statistics. This year, the trend is running even higher.

The individual homeowner or tenant does not have to feel helpless about this trend, however. In fact, the Police Department needs help. There are approximately 130 miles of streets in Twin Falls, and during the daytime, only five uniformed officers available for patrol duty.

What can you, the citizen, do?

Become one of the growing number of residents joining the city's Neighborhood Watch program!

A story in this Sunday's Times-News will detail how the Neighborhood Watch concept started, how it works and how it benefits both the individual and the community.

In addition, staff writer Glen Warchol will report on how a successful Neighborhood Watch program has reduced crime in Pocatello, as well as provide our readers with other tips from police on how to safeguard their homes.

Don't miss these articles in Sunday's newspaper. They could save you a fortune!

Corinne Jensen laughs in anticipation of a new sensation

BOB DLASHMUTT/Times-News

The soft fuzz of a chick at her cheek, Robin Darcy, who is blind, experiences the fair

Sight and sound of fair missing, but it's still fun

Deaf and blind students enjoy the fair

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

FILER — The Twin Falls County Fair can be a feast for the sensations.

Pigs squealing and chicks peeping. Soft lamb's wool. Passing whiffs of popcorn, tater pigs, hamburgers and tacos on the midway. The kaleidoscope of products in the merchants' building.

Thursday, elementary school children from the Gooding State School for the Deaf and Blind experienced the various sensations of the fair, lingering over those pleasing them the most.

"Oh, teacher, look at the wedding cake with the real waterfall inside!... Look at the Christmas tree at The Homestead display!

Are we going to see Santa Claus?" the children said with the fingers and their eyes. Fingers flutter with excitement.

A stove with a glowing red light at Petersen's of Gooding drew lots of attention. "It's a pretend fire," one of the teachers "said" in American Sign Language, but the children kept making the rippling sign for "fire." Some finally touched the glass panel, which proved this fire wasn't hot.

Several woolly monkey puppets pleased the youngsters so much that the merchant, Aldan Enterprises of Filer, gave two of the creatures to the school.

In the art building, a painting of a purple smoke-snorting dragon attracted a small crowd. The teachers and children all shared the sign for dragon, using fingers as fangs and snarling mouths.

Guided by FFA member Lori Merrell, the hands of 11-year-old Robin Darcy marveled at the delicate fuzz of a baby chicken. "I wish I could have him," she said with a sigh.

Sighted children began to crowd around the little, dark-haired girl, reaching out to guide her hands in hope of showing her what they could see.

"This is the horn of the goat," Robin was told. Head bowed, she fingered the rough spike. "Feel this; that's the spine." The small hands traced the bony back. The girl could tell the muscles underneath were tense.

"She's just nervous because there's people around," Merrell explained. "Tell her not to be afraid," Robin said.

Corinne, 7, who is confined to a wheelchair, shyly touched the nose of a donkey. Later, as she rocked back and forth, she imitated the sounds of a baaing sheep she could hear behind her.

The Gooding school's annual trip also included goodies from the concession stands and a lunch in the picnic area.

What was their favorite part of the fair?

Andrea's hand went to her forehead to sign "cows." Vicki's favorite was "horses." Ginny seemed to like everything, but she signed "bunnies" with special pleasure.

Mines

Symms says White Clouds sites unlawful

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mining in the White Cloud Mountains north of Ketchum won't occur in the near future, claims Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho.

Present law will continue to prohibit mining excavation in the White Clouds, and the issue has been manufactured only as a campaign trick of liberal Democrats seeking to re-elect Gov. John Evans, Symms charged at a press conference in Twin Falls on Thursday.

"It's a non-issue that's been brought up to help get Evans re-elected.

"Mining up there is already settled by law: the 1972 Sawtooth National Recreation Area Act," Symms said. "Mining isn't going to be allowed in the White Clouds. It's that simple."

But Symms said he does support ASARCO Co.'s plans to inventory mineral deposits on the company's claims within the recreation area.

"If the U.S. government has to compensate ASARCO sometime down the road for those claims, then they'd be foolish not to want to see what deposits are up there. I personally think it's in the national interest to know what minerals are there in case of future emergency or need."

Symms compared that to his stand to stop, or at least reduce, planned sales of silver stockpiles by Reagan's administration.

"We are in a minerals and resource war with Russia, whether people want to admit it or not. It's a strategically stupid move to sell off such important mineral reserves at this time.

All four members of Idaho's congressional delegation have submitted a plea to the administration to halt the sale of 150 million ounces from the nation's silver stockpile.

Symms said the continually postponed plans to sell silver stockpiles have been "unfair for the people of the Silver Valley (where the Bunker Hill mine is located) to have this held over their heads."

Symms also said he absolutely would not support establishing additional wilderness areas in Idaho unless some compensation was made to the state for the lost economic value.

This counters his fellow statesman, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who said earlier this year he would support new wilderness areas in the White Clouds and in parts of northern Idaho.

"I've always said I'd support 3.5 million acres of wilderness in our state," Symms said. "We presently have 3.8 million acres."

Only if there is some type of trade-off, such as the federal government releasing BLM lands to the state for economic use, would he consider supporting additional wilderness areas in Idaho, Symms said.

On another topic, Symms set aside repeated criticism of his receiving substantial campaign contributions from oil industry political-action committees during the 1979-80 campaign.

According to records of the Federal Election Commission, Symms ranks second of the 10 members of the House and Senate who received the most money from these oil-interest groups. Symms, who received a reported $142,330, ranked behind only Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who received $144,639 from these committees.

"Most of these people, who worked for or were connected to oil companies, contributed on their own — as independents," Symms said.

Zebarth, Sharp and Knapp named top showmen

Showman competition was a real donnybrook

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was so tough, even Mork and Mindy were fighting.

During the 4-H round-robin fitting and showing championship at the Twin Falls County Fair Thursday, the swine show ring turned into a fight ring, as five pigs took turns fighting each other.

Instead of showing the animals, contestants spent much of their time separating the fighting swine.

Even Mork and Mindy, two Duroc pigs owned by Molly Quesnell that have peacefully shared a stall in the swine barn throughout the fair, were trying to get a piece of each other's ear.

The round-robin competition pits the champion horse, beef cattle, dairy cattle, swine and sheep showmen against each other in a contest requiring them to show all five animals.

After she won the sheep fitting and showing competition Wednesday, Angie Denton of Twin Falls said sheep are probably the toughest of the livestock animals to show. They must be led by hand instead of halter, unlike horses, beef and dairy cattle, she said. And they cannot be left to wander around the show ring as swine do.

But the round-robin competition was so tough this year, Denton, who won the grand championship last year, lost her title. She was named the reserve champion.

As she walked away from the cattle show arena where the final results were announced, Denton said she did not think she made any mistakes. The competition was just tougher.

The five 4-H champions who competed in the round robin represented the best of nearly 500 4-H members who competed in livestock fitting and showing events Tuesday and Wednesday. From among the five individual champions, it was Angela Knapp, winner of the horse fitting and showing contest, who emerged as the top 4-H showman of the fair.

"Showing horses, you have to be really attentive all the time," the 16-year-old from Twin Falls said. "When you go to the other animals, it's a little easier."

Round-robin fitting and showing competition was also held for FFA members. Mike Zebarth of Twin Falls won the senior division contest, and Chuck Sharp of Filer captured the junior division title.

The round robin forces each champion to take a crash course in the subtleties of showing unfamiliar animals. All of the champions spent much of Wednesday night and Thursday morning getting advice from friends to prepare for the contest.

After the dairy showing, swine champ Melanie Taylor of Twin Falls complained, "I think I set up backwards." The proper dairy cattle pose has one leg slightly back of the other to show off the udder, she explained. The leg closest to where the judge stands should be back, she said. But she put that leg forward to hide the udder, the proper pose for a cow in non-dairy competition.

Brett Barton of Twin Falls, the beef fitting and showing champ, said a friend gave him some last-minute advice about showing horses. The advice: "Watch the judge all the time, and keep the animal's feet underneath them."

Jerome dialysis center proposal receives negative recommendation

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

JEROME — A proposal for a Jerome dialysis center received a negative assessment Wednesday by the Region IV council of the Idaho Health Systems Agency.

With one dissenting vote, the seven-member council voted to recommend disapproval of the center, based on an evaluation of the proposal by the IHSA's Boise staff.

Ogden Limited Care Dialysis Center Inc. is seeking approval to set up a center near St. Benedict's Hospital to provide acute dialysis treatment at the center and home dialysis training.

As part of the certificate of need process, the corporation's proposal was reviewed in a public hearing Wednesday night by the IHSA's regional council.

The Region IV council's recommendation will now go to the IHSA executive committee, which meets Sept. 24. However, the final decision on whether to issue a certificate of need will be made by the Idaho Health Facilities Review Board, which is appointed by Gov. John Evans.

Representatives of the Ogden firm expressed dismay at the decision, saying they had not been aware that both the IHSA staff and the Idaho Vocational Rehabilitation Department opposed the center.

Letane M. Fonoti, Ogden facility administrator, said the center would have two dialysis stations in a trailer, located on land leased from St. Benedict's. The staff would include a nurse, technologist, dietician and social worker, he said, and Dr. Barry Koerpel, a kidney specialist, also would make frequent visits.

Fonoti said many southern Idaho patients must now drive to Boise, Salt Lake City or Ogden to seek home dialysis training, which indicates a need for a center here. Also, southern Idaho patients needing emergency dialysis must be flown elsewhere.

However, Ed Easterling of the Vocational Rehabilitation Department, who attended the hearing, contended the area does not have enough dialyzed patients to support a for-profit clinic without drawing on persons already trained for home dialysis.

He also asserted the clinic's fee projections were overly expensive compared with his department's costs for similar operations.

The IHSA staff analysis said the Odgen firm's application did not demonstrate adequate need for the clinic and did not contain the necessary cost/revenue projections.

Fonoti said the financial information was not provided because he was unaware it was needed due to confusing information provided by the IHSA and other state agencies. He offered to provide the information, but he was told by IHSA staffer John Collins it was too late.

Fonoti also said Koerpel would attract persons with kidney disease who might otherwise leave this area, assuring the necessary clients. New dialysis techniques, avialable through Koerpel, would make the clinic particularly cost-effective, he said.

Auto accident near fair kills Idaho Falls man

FILER — Twin Falls County Fair traffic was tied up for more than an hour Thursday afternoon by an accident that claimed the life of an Idaho Falls man.

Ivan Burrows, 72, of 705 Lakewood Ave., Idaho Falls, was dead at the scene, according to an Idaho State Police spokesman. The accident happened at U.S. 30 and U.S. 93.

Mrs. Brown was uninjured.

State Police reported that traffic was especially congested due to the fair, but they were able to divert it around the accident.

Cassia OKs emergency levy

BURLEY — An increase in student population forced the Cassia County School Board to amend the district's budget Wednesday night to certify an emergency levy.

The need for the $131,000 levy was an additional 120 students returning to Cassia classes this fall. According to Superintendent Norman Hurst, the levy will not require approval by the district's voters. Under Idaho law, when a district's enrollment grows, the board can amend the budget to certify a levy for additional funds, he said.

In other action, Design West Inc. of Logan and Boise was selected by the board as the architects for an upcoming building project, and the sale of five used school buses was authorized.

Carnival proud of safety record

FILER — The rides at the county fair are safer than airlines, according to Reed Williams, owner of the carnival rides.

Williams says there has not been an accident yet at the 1981 fair because he and his staff make a genuine effort to ensure ride safety through daily inspections and safety check lists.

"Inevitably, there will be problems, but we're not out here to kill children," Williams says. "We're a viable business. We have to make a profit and do it safely. Our insurance rates go up if we have an accident."

Williams says his insurance company awarded him a plaque last year for superior maintenance and safety standards because he incurred only five accidents during an eight-month period in 1980.

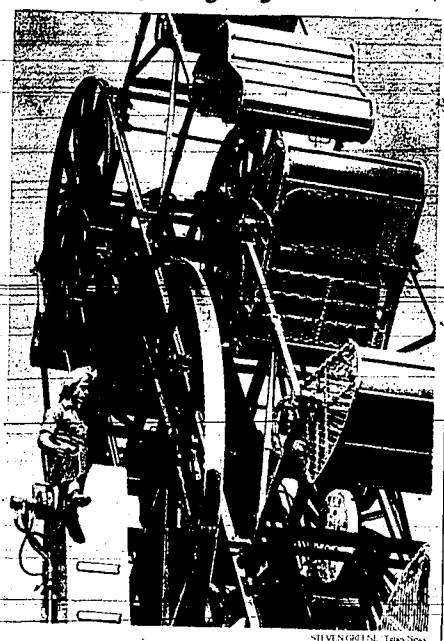

None of the accidents were major, Williams says.

"Sixty percent of accidents happen when people are entering or leaving rides," Williams says. "Kids get excited and they trip or fall."

Another common cause of accidents is passenger negligence. Williams says accidents often happen when children are showing off for their friends.

The carnival owner says he closes rides that show evidence of a malfunction.

"You can always replace a ride, but you can't replace a kid's life," says Leo Alexander, a 30-year veteran of the carnival business.

Deputy pay hike is unlikely

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The county commissioners and a representative for the disgruntled county sheriff's deputies emerged from a meeting Wednesday without any salary agreement.

The meeting between the commissioners and lawyer Greg Fuller, who is representing some of the deputies, followed Tuesday's 45-minute public hearing on the county's proposed 1981-1982 budget.

The county commissioners' decision does not mean the end of the deputies' efforts to win larger salaries, however.

Several deputies are scheduled to meet next week with Fuller to come up with the another course of action.

The deputies maintain their salary and benefit package is well below salary and benefit levels offered by comparable departments, including the Twin Falls Police Department.

And the 7-percent salary increase proposed in the county budget will only further the gap, deputies say.

Tuesday, Fuller appeared at the budget hearing on their behalf, urging the commissioners to revise their budget priorities in order to give the deputies more money. Without such a commitment from the commissioners, Sheriff James Munn's more experienced deputies will probably leave the department for more lucrative employment, Fuller said.

Wednesday, the commissioners told Fuller they probably will not be able to grant the request. In making that determination, the commissioners cited fiscal restraints, as well as a state law prohibiting them from raising any portion of the budget once it has been published.

The budget was published last month.

Fuller had maintained that another section of the law authorized additional expenditures in order to "restore order."

But the commissioners said they were skeptical the law would apply in this case.

"I would think it would pertain to a flood or something like that as far as getting any type of funds," said Commissioner Marvin Hempleman. "But so far, we don't have any kind of an emergency."

Fuller acknowledged the financial bind facing county officials.

"It's obvious the county doesn't have any money. I don't think they're holding out; they simply don't have the money," he said.

Fuller said he continued to view any legal action against the county commissioners as being unproductive, but he said other, "positive" options are being considered.

Among those is putting the issue before the voters, an approach Fuller said he is seriously considering.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's turning into a cause more than anything else," he said. "In fact, I am ready to start approaching the Republican leaders in the area and start asking for their help. I'm a lawyer, not a politican. This is new to me. But I want to get the ball rolling; I want to let these guys know somebody cares."

Gooding state school gets grants

By BRUCE HAMMOND

GOODING — Four education grants are on their way to the State School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

In a meeting at the school Wednesday, the State Board of Education unanimously approved acceptance of the grants following a short presentation by school director Keith Tolzin.

The new funds and their purposes are:

• A $25,706 grant from the Mountain Plains Region Center for services to deaf/blind children, for staff training and materials need in the deaf/blind multi-handicapped unit.

• A grant of $159,805 from the Title I program will be used for supplemental staff and the purchase of materials for both the school's residential education at Gooding and in regional programs throughout Idaho.

• A $15,100 grant has been awarded to the school by the Idaho Department of Vocational Education for a vocational program for the blind or deaf. The money will be used to hire a work-study facilitator for the residential program.

• An $85,832 grant from the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act will be used for placing students in work-study situations and also for two staff positions: a work-study counselor and a part-time secretary.

In other business, the Board of Education approved funding requests to the Legislature for special health education programs involving dentistry and medicine.

These on-going programs secure positions for Idaho medical students at other states' schools, plus help supplement much of the tuition costs. All of the funding recommendations will affect qualifying students enrolling in the fall 1982.

The most significant change will be the gradual phasing out of the Utah Medical Program. The board will request about $314,000 to help Idaho students already enrolled at Utah's medical center under this program. No new students will be considered, however.

Other medical education program funding the board will request includes $200,040 for the Regional Dental Education Program between Idaho State University and the University of Washington (six student positions), $425,000 for the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education student exchange program (three student seats) and $165,000 for the Creighton Dental Program (three student seats).

Filer council rejects new patrol car idea

FILER — The purchase of a new police car was rejected by City Council at a special meeting Thursday evening.

Instead, council agreed to repair the existing police car.

The only council member to vote in favor of buying a new car was police Commissioner Wanda Shafer, who proposed that "we replace the police car while we still have trade-in value."

Terry Lechner, a certified mechanic for T & S Repair Service in Buhl, presented council with an appraisal that said in part, "I do not believe the car can be expected to perform well another year. The cost of putting the car in shape will be expensive. However, keeping it up will be more expensive."

Councilman Bob Fort asked, "How many times has the council been faced with this? Every time a car gets a year old, it's ready for the graveyard."

Councilman Lee Alexander accused police Chief James Trentham of neglecting repairs. "If this car had proper maintenance, it wouldn't be in this condition," he said.

Trentham explained he had delayed fixing the vehicle for three weeks until council made its decision to repair or replace the car.

Connors, Borg gain semifinals

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, a three-time champion determined to add one more crown, and Bjorn Borg, seeking the one big prize in tennis that has eluded him, won their matches in contrasting style Thursday to gain the semifinals of the U.S. Open Championships.

Connors, still driven by the same competitive intensity that made him a world champion, overwhelmed Eliot Teltscher, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2, on a cool and windy night to reach the semifinals for the eighth consecutive year.

"I've won the Open three times and I'm looking for a fourth," Connors said after beating Teltscher for the seventh time in a row. "I've been stuck on three a few years, and three isn't really my favorite number. I'd like to get off it. I want to win the Open more than any other tournament."

Connors was fined $400 for making an obscene gesture with his racket.

Borg, who will renew an old rivarly with Connors in Saturday's semis, had a lot more difficulty during the afternoon, but once again his uncanny knack—for winning the big points enabled him to survive three tense tie-breakers to beat a frustrated Roscoe Tanner, 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6.

Tanner, after a sloppy start when he committed 23 unforced errors in the first two sets, pulled back to within a single point of evening the match in the fourth set tie-break, but the unemotional Swede, claiming he feels no pressure," held firm to pull out the match.

Borg, in reaching the Open semifinals for the fifth time, won the final set tie-break 9-7 on a backhand pass off his first volley. Moments earlier, Tanner had set point at 6-5, but on the next point he sent a backhand into the net.

Borg, seeded second, had taken the first set tie-break 7-4 and Tanner the third set by an identical score of 7-4.

"If I lose that set point in the tie-break, he would be back in the match," Borg said. "He took a few chances and made some points."

Defending champion John McEnroe will meet Vitas Gerulaitis in the other semifinal, while in Friday's women's semifinals it will be Chris Evert Lloyd against Martina Navratilova and Tracy Austin against Barbara Potter.

Connors, seeded fourth, had his service broken only twice all night, and the first occasion came on Teltscher's very first attempt. However, Connors had breaks in both the first and third games of the opening set, and this was enough to give him the edge.

Teltscher, who has made rapid progress in the rankings since turning pro in 1977 and was seeded No. 8 here, made one last shot at Connors in the opening game of the second set. Teltscher had six break points and carried Connors to eight deuces, but couldn't affect the break.

The one game took 15 minutes to play, and Connors required only 27 minutes after that to complete the set.

Connors was unstoppable in the third set, sweeping through the first four games with the loss of only six points. When Teltscher finally held service in the fifth game, he held his fists up in mock triumph, and he then broke service for the second time before Connors closed out the match.

In contrast, there was only a single service break between Borg and Tanner through the first three sets of their match. Borg achieving that in the second game of the second set. When Borg broke again in the fourth game of the fourth set and then held to go ahead 4-1, it seemed over for the bullet-serving Tanner.

But the ninth-seeded American then got his only break of the match in the seventh game to give himself another life. In the 10th game, Borg had two match points at 15-40, but with the sellout crowd at the National Tennis Center cheering him on, Tanner saved both with smashes and then held.

Tanner won the first three points of the fourth set tie-break, and later led 4-3 and 6-5. Serving at 7-7, Tanner sent a forehand volley wide, then ended the two hour and 49 minute match when his service return set up Borg for a winning backhand pass.

Mickey Young has won more than $250,000 during 10 years as a professional cowboy

By MIKE PRATER
Times-News writer

FILER — Running through the Official Pro Rodeo Media Guide, one gets the impression Jerome's Mickey Young has had a successful career as a cowboy.

A list of accomplishments says Young is a five-time qualifier for the National Finals Rodeo, a Wilderness Circuit bareback champion for four consecutive years starting in 1977, twice a runner-up for the bareback world title and the winner of more $250,000 in earnings and bonuses.

He is considered by his peers as one of the best and he's got the credentials to back it up. In 10 years as a Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association member, he has beaten the best, he's set records in dust-filled arenas across the country and he's made enough money to live comfortably on a large ranch north of Jerome.

Last year, Young surprised the rodeo world by vaulting to the top of the bareback division from the season's start. Up until the National Finals, he fell only twice during 250 mounts, thus qualifing him for the NFR.

And Young has many more pieces of the past put together to keep his fond rodeo memories alive for years to come. Out front, it sounds like a successful story about a man, his horse and their drive to make a buck.

Yet, there is one thing he doesn't have and the 6-0, 160-pound Idaho cowboy refuses to quit jumping on barebacks until it's his.

"I want the world. I want the world bareback championship," Young said during his stop here for this week's Twin Falls County Rodeo.

It's the dream of any competitor to become the best in his or her sport. Only a drop-in-the-bucket few make it to the big time but Young is on the verge of becoming the bigshot of the big-timers.

In 1980, Young won more than $80,000 and up until the National Finals Rodeo, he led the bareback by as much as $5,000. But "things suddenly fell apart" at Oklahoma City, Okla. Defending world champion Bruce Ford put together one of his famous consistency-filled performances, riding 10 straight barebacks and won the average and a first-place check for $17,500.

Ferguson nears rodeo honors

Ferguson, who recently became the first cowboy to win over $600,000 in a career, added a second-place 10.7 calf roping time to his fourth-place, 7.1 steer wrestling performance.

Ferguson's picked up his 7.1 during Wednesday night's slack session and was the leader heading into Thursday's show. But three cowboys passed his time, thus moving him to fourth.

"Both runs were clean, but I had a little trouble getting out of the chute," the Miami, Okla., cowboy said. "I'll have to wait and see if I win any money before I can be real pleased."

There were several other cowboys also trying to win money.

The most competitive of the events — and most painful to the cowboys — was the bull riding.

Harold Haptonstall received a rare 85 marking for his ride on "Mayday" but was kicked in the head after jumping off the bull. Haptonstall was helped to his feet and walked off, but Larry Rehwelt wasn't as lucky.

After being stepped on by a bull, Rehwelt was carried out of the arena unconscious — the second of the night.

Art Ray had the second 80 score of the night riding National Finals Rodeo bull "Scatterbrain." He had an 80.

Tom Puryear moved Ferguson out of the steer wrestling lead, wrapping up a 5.4 time and former College of Southern Idaho cowboy Sterling Whines leads the saddle bronc with a 71.

Bareback — 1 Kelly Walden 78 2 Lewis Field 74, 3 Danny Brady 74, 4 Larry Peabody 72, 5 Joe Rudd 69

Steer wrestling — 1 Tommy Puryear 5.4, 2 Bryce Hall 6.1, 3 Bob Christopherson 6.9, 4 Mark Cresta 7.1, 5 Danny Torricellas 7.5

Saddle bronc — 1 Sterling Whines 71, 2 Dixon Hamilton 69, 3 Tom Miller 68, 4 Lewis Field 62, 5 Bill Whines 66

Calf roping — 1 Ned Rayner 10.1, 2 Tom Ferguson 10.7, 3 Jimmie Cooper 19.8, 4 Dave Smith 22.6, 5 Joe Sagers 24.0

Zamora's TD run sparks Castleford by Murtaugh 18-12

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — John Zamora snapped Castleford out of an offensive lethargy Thursday night and into an 18-12 decision over the Murtaugh Red Devils.

For nearly six quarters the Wolves had been moving fitfully and pointlessly through their Magic Valley Conference schedule. With 35 seconds left in the first half Thursday, they trailed Murtaugh 12-0 and didn't appear capable of doing much about it.

Then quarterback Rance Pugmire flipped a little screen to Zamora and the diminutive speedster, shaking off two tacklers along the way, turned it into a 54-yard scoring bomb. From then on, it was basically downhill for the Red Devils — although they had enough left for a scare at the end.

It was the moment Castleford Coach Randy Clark had been waiting for.

"It was the turning point," he agreed. "Up to then I had this feeling that it was the Oakley game all over. We were justing floating offensively. Defensively we were mauling and not sticking. But that screen pass did it. The guys got their heads up and you could feel the difference in their attitude at halftime."

Clark also noted the play wiped out any self-doubt the Wolves might have had due to the fact that their usual one-two running punch, Dave Ensunsa and Rob Owen were out with injuries along with some other players.

"Now we've got Wells (Nev.) next week and we should get some of our injured players back before our next conference game against Mackay," he said.

Murtaugh Coach Jim Anderson said it simply was a matter of his 16-man crew running out of gas.

The screen pass hyped Castleford's line just as the wear of going both ways was beginning to tell on the Devils.

"Our offensive line just couldn't hold them out. We just don't have enough players to keep some rested ones in the game," he said.

When they were fresh the Devils put on a pretty fair show. In the first quarter Roy Nebeker picked off a Castleford pass and return it 21 yards to the Wolves' 10. He picked up the touchdown on a short plunge but the extra point run failed.

Late in the first period, Murtaugh recovered a fumble to thwart Castleford on the Wolves 37-yard line. Two plays later Nebeker hooked up with Barry Messner on a long pass to the 13. The payoff came on a fourth and eight situation when sophomore Pratt Matthews picked a Nebeker pass off a Castleford defender's fingertips and fell into the end zone.

Immediately Castleford bounced back on the running of Zamora to a first down at the Murtaugh 10 but the Devils held there. They had to punt out and then came the game-turning screen pass. The Wolves then used the old "swinging gate" to spring Zamora into the end zone for the two-pointer.

The Wolves came out firing in the second half, booming on a 30-yard scramble by Pugmire plus a 15-yard penalty against Murtaugh to the Devils' 20-yard line. A 15-yard penalty appeared to stymie that drive — but only momentarily. Pugmire fired a 29-yard strike to Ken Burgess — a cross country runner up to last week — for the touchdown. Then on a center-eligible play, the swinging gate formation earned a two-point pass from Pugmire to Burgess.

Castleford scored its final points with 8:46 left in the game when Rick Vulk broke through to nail Nebeker for a safety. But just seconds earlier, Nebeker had breathed hope back into Murtaugh with an 80-yard punt return that was nullified by a penalty at the Murtaugh 15-yard line.

On what should have been the last play of the game, Messner and Nebeker hooked up on a 45-yard bomb that carried to the Castleford 10. Castleford was caught on an interference call and the Wolves had to take the penalty and 15 yards and try an after-the-game play from the Castleford 40. This time Pugmire nailed the victory down with an interception.

Record-setting Idaho tests Weber Saturday

OGDEN, Utah — "Fresh from a record-breaking performance against Simon Fraser, the University of Idaho Vandals turn their attention to the Big Sky Conference Saturday night.

The Vandals visit Weber State College in a 7:30 p.m. contest. It will be the first game for the Wildcats under Coach Mike Price.

Idaho goes into the contest without much background since the Wildcats are under new management, largely new personnel and under new lights. The upshot is the expectation that this will be the largest crowd ever to attend a Big Sky Conference game in Ogden.

To prepare for the night game, Coach Jerry Davitch put his Vandals through an under-the-lights workout at Moscow High School field Wednesday evening.

"This is one game we have to win," said Idaho sports information director Dave Kellogg. "Quite frankly, our coaches don't know what to expect. They think we are going to see pass the ball, pass the ball, pass the ball. They have a junior college quarterback transfer who threw for over 2,000 yards last year and Coach Price thinks the team's strongest position is the receiving corps.

"Our concerns are it's their season opener and home opener and those brand new lights. They're expecting a big crowd. Because of that, we expect the adrenalin to be pumping and unless we can get to them early, we might have a tough night all night long."

Weber State's defense also is an unknown quantity but the Vandals know exactly what they want to try against it.

That was established against Simon Fraser when they set three Division I-AA records inducing a total offense of 703 yards that broke the old record of 660 set by Nevada-Reno against Western Washington in 1978.

Idaho also rushed for 526 yards, eclipsing the 505 by North Carolina A&T against Winston Salem last season. The other mark was for the highest average gain per rushing play with 9.56 yards on 55 attempts. The old I-AA mark was 9.41 set by Boise State against Idaho State in 1979. The records, of course, also become conference standards.

Individually, Idaho quarterback Ken Hobart tops the Big Sky in total offense with 256 yards per game, having collected 155 yards on 12 running plays. Russ Davis came out of the opener with a 15.3 yard-per-rush average with 122 yards in eight carries and Wally jones stood at 11.6 with 81 in seven tries.

Asked if the Vandals planned on throwing the ball a little more against Weber State than Simon Fraser, Kellogg asked, "How can you not try to run the ball after picking up over 500 yards in your first game?"

"With the success we had with the ground game, unless that's totally closed off I don't think the coaches will get too far from the run. But we are prepared to throw it," Kellogg said.

Miami uses 'big play offense' to thump Steelers 30-10

MIAMI (UPI) — Coach Don Shula figured if his Miami Dolphins were going to stay with the still-feared Pittburgh Steelers, it would have to be with a big-play offense.

That philosophy worked perfectly Thursday night when the Dolphins cranked out long gainer after long gainer for a 30-10 victory over the Steelers, who fell to 0-2 for the first time since 1970.

"We went for it — for the big plays — figuring that was the only way to win a game like this. We didn't hold back," Shula said.

The 51-year-old coach said game balls went to running back Tony Nathan and safety Glenn Blackwood.

As usual, Nathan praised his teammates.

"Our offensive line was doing their job, all of them. I'm just thankful they did," he said.

"No excuses," Coach Chuck Noll said. "Miami just played well. They beat us every way. We're just going to have to play better, naturally. We might use Miami as a model."

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw praised the Dolphins, but preferred to look ahead to the rest of the schedule.

"We've got to win a game to realize we can win," he said. "Maybe if we can get a win we can get back on the track again. I think we need to relax — quit thinking about mistakes and have some fun."

Woodley scored one touchdown on a one-yard sneak and passed 13 yards to Nathan for another. Rookie running back Tommy Vigorito sewed up the victory with an 87-yard punt return for a score late in the third quarter. Fullback Andra Franklin, another rookie, scored the other Dolphin touchdown from one yard.

Pittsburgh scored all 10 of its points in the first half as an inspired Miami defense led by Blackwood's second and third interceptions in two games held the Steelers in check.

Rookie David Trout gave the Steelers their only lead at 3-0 with a 23-yard field goal early in the first period. The Steelers closed to 13-10 at the half on a 33-yard scoring strike to Jim Smith from Terry Bradshaw, who was harassed in his own backfield by Miami lineman and blitzing linebackers all night long.

The Dolphins took complete charge with Nathan's catch over the middle from Woodley. Nathan set up the score himself on the first play of the possession by squirting 23 yards up the middle to the Steeler 31. Woodley then hit Jimmy Cefalo for 13 yards and one play later Nathan scored.

Jerome, Wood River seek playoffs; Indians have rivals on their minds

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome and Wood River are thinking playoffs while Buhl thinks rivalry to highlight A-2 and eight-man football action for Magic Valley teams this weekend.

Jerome entertains Wood River tonight with the winner taking a step toward participating in the state A-2 playoffs. Buhl draws the difficult assignment of trying to trim Madison at Rexburg while Burley also is in the east for a Cross State Conference game, playing at Rigby.

Eight-man play will have Richfield opening its season at Fairfield against Camas County while Carey travels to Rockland. Both are afternoon games.

Jerome is trying to rebound from consecutive defeats at the hands of A-1 foes, Caldwell and Twin Falls. The Tigers were overwhelmed by the big Cougars in the opener but played with excellent determination in extending Twin Falls before bowing 21-15.

Wood River has a 14-0 decision over Wendell to its credit and Coach John Hopkins is hopeful this is the year the Wolverines can get back on the winning track against A-2 competition.

"You lose this game you can just about kiss the playoffs goodbye," said Jerome Coach Jon Jund. "I can't see this league winding up with everyone 1-1.

"We saw Wood River play last week and they do two things we'll have to stop to beat them," Jund added. "They like to throw quick passes and mostly to their big tight end. The other thing is stopping their power off-tackle play out of the T-formation.

"Defensively, I think the teams match up pretty well sizewise. We'll try to run the veer at them with a little more throwing than we had last week."

For the past several years a Buhl-Madison confrontation usually meant two of the best three A-2 teams in the state. And for that reason, the short-lived rivalry has become heated.

Madison thumped the Indians last year 41-0 but in the previous season, Buhl whipped Madison 15-0 in the opener and then 27-0 in the playoffs.

Madison has shown its teeth, wiping out Sugar-Salem 61-0 and Blackfoot 46-14. Buhl, riding its defense, topped Gooding 13-7 before being nipped by Kuna 15-14 last time out.

Burley battled Twin Falls to a tie and stunned Minico with a touchdown on the first play of that game before the Spartans exploded into a 32-12 decision.

Rigby nipped Bear Lake and then fell to Snake River.

Eight-man fans have been waiting two weeks for Richfield to put its anticipated juggernaut on display. The Tigers do just that this afternoon at Fairfield but there could be a disadvantage because Camas County already as played twice.

Richfield is voted by conference coaches as the team most likely to represent them in the eight-man playoffs this fall in Boise. Since there's little love lost between the two schools, Camas County would like to becloud that thinking a little. They'll meet again later in the season.

Carey has only a 13-man turnout but the Panthers could do well in their opening game at Rockland. Rockland was shut out by North Gem in its first outing last week.

Camas County High wins 3-way match

Volleyball

FAIRFIELD — Camas County High School captured a triangular volleyball match Thursday evening, defeating both Dietrich 15-3, 15-8 and Bliss 15-4, 15-3.

The Mushers, who kept their record unblemished at 5-0, received strong efforts from hitters Liane Huntington and Mickey McCammon. "They did a beautiful job all evening," said Camas Coach John Hurley. "When they attacked we were able to get points."

Dietrich managed to win its match against Bliss, 15-3 and 15-8.

Filer defeats Glenns Ferry

Filer High School evened its record at 3-3 by defeating visiting Glenns Ferry 15-9 and 15-10.

Shoshone captures three-way match

Shoshone High School hosted and won a three-way match Thursday night, improving its perfect record to 5-0.

The Indians trounced Wendell 15-7 and 15-3 and scraped past Richfield 15-9 and 15-11. In the other match, Wendell beat Richfield 15-2 and 16-14.

Shoshone also dominated the junior varsity competition, defeating Richfield 15-9 amd 15-12 and Wendell 15-6 and 15-4.

Twin Falls survives Wood River

In a tough three-game match, Twin Falls High School outlasted Wood River Thursday night, 15-12, 12-15 and 15-12.

"It was a real barnburner," Bruin Coach Cathy Anderson said, stating the obvious. "Wood River is a big, hard-hitting team with excellent floor coverage."

"It was the best match we've had in a couple of years," said unashamed Wood River Coach Rick Neumann.

Valley downs Declo

Valley High School improved its record to 2-1 by beating Declo 15-2 and 15-13 Thursday night.

Christy Kent's blocking and spiking kept Declo at bay. The Hornets never quite got going until the second game against Valley's second string.

Valley's junior varsity also won, 16-14 and 15-9.

Burley edges Buhl

Burley High School picked up its second victory in six matches Thursday night in a hard-fought, three-game battle against Buhl, 15-8, 4-15 and 16-14.

Gooding surges past Kimberly

After losing the initial contest, Gooding High School came back to take two straight games and the match from Kimberly, 9-15, 15-6 and 15-6.

"We made some mistakes, they kind of went ahead and challenged us and that was it," Kimberly Coach Jean Emerson summed up.

Kimberly won the junior varsity match 9-15, 15-3 and 15-8.

Sophomores

POCATELLO — Corky Federico's destructive running led the Twin Falls High School sophomores to their second victory in as many football games Thursday night, as the Bruins crushed Highland 40-6.

Federico, a 5-foot-9, 170-pounder, gained 178 yards on 17 carries from his fullback position, mostly on dives and veer plays.

Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia noted that Federico rushed determinedly, gaining the majority of his yardage on second efforts. "It took three or four guys to pull him down," Astorquia said.

On Federico's lone touchdown run, a 15-yard jaunt shortly before halftime, he was hit at the line of scrimmage and survived contact twice more before scoring.

Quarterback Eric Anderson scored twice on option keepers, while Eric Watson notched the Bruins' first touchdown on a Statue of Liberty play.

In its next encounter, Twin Falls hosts Minico at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Jerome's second-year men outlasted by Hansen's vets, 14-6

HANSEN — Hansen High School tallied two first-half touchdowns and made them stand up with an impressive defensive effort Thursday night, defeating the Jerome sophomores 14-6.

The Huskies held Jerome three times inside their 20-yard line during the second half, once at the six-inch line.

Todd Bennett, a senior, also saved two touchdowns. Twice he pulled down a runaway Tigers, once after a Jerome fumble recovery and again following a Tiger interception. "He saved our behinds," Hansen Coach Rod Pruett said.

Hansen opened the scoring on Bill Denney's 12-yard run in the first quarter, with the conversion failing. The Huskies stretched their lead to 14-0 later in the period on a 38-yard strike from Cooper Urie to Steve Eiman. Denney ran for the two-point conversion.

Pruett praised his defensive line, composed, among others, of Scott Long, Clayton Walker, Steve Shouse and Karl Admire. Linebacker Travis Lierman also performed well.

The Tigers' defensive effort was also spirited. Jerome held Hansen twice inside the Tiger 20 after intermission.

Denney enjoyed the most productive evening on offense, gaining 103 yards on 15 carries.

Young

Young fell on one of his rides and was disqualified for slapping the horse on another, finishing in third place. He picked up a $10,000 check and for the first time during the season, Young had fallen to second place in the overall standings ahead of J.C. Trujillo. Unfortunately for Young, it was the last rodeo of the year and he stayed in second.

"That was a real bad deal. I don't even want to tell you how I felt afterwards. It's not something you can say," Young said after thinking about it for a while. "That's the hardest thing that has ever happened to me. I was ridin' well enough to win the world, I don't know why I didn't."

With the exception of the record books, 1980 has blown away with the dust and the cowboys are working on 1981 standings. Young's performance at the NFR still haunts him at times and he's going at it harder, trying to put himself in a good spot to make a run at the title this December.

Young's isn't as impressive as he was last year — he is fifth with more than $30,000 — but the 28-year-old continues to believe he's better than ever.

"Right now I'm in the prime of my ridin'," Young said. "I'm doing better than ever, but I'm waiting for that one lucky thing that will really get me clickin. I thought it happened last year, but evidently not."

A world rodeo title is something that takes handfuls of money, years of work and hours of dedication.

Hoping to achieve the top honor, Young spends more than 300 days a year at more than 140 rodeos. He goes through $13,000 in plane tickets and twice that much on other traveling expenses. And to top it off, he leaves a beautiful wife and a growing daughter at home.

"It's worth it," said Young, who will ride during the finale of the Filer rodeo Saturday night. "I set goals to win the world and I'm not going to weaken until I realize those goals."

The Filer rodeo is just one small stop for Young, but he performed as if the long-awaited title was on the line. He received a re-ride on his first horse when it came out flat, and he picked up a 79 on his second attempt.

"It was a good ride, but it won't do me any good if I can't put another with it Saturday night," Young said. "It got me some day-money anyway."

Young has two more months to put himself into a position to capture the world title. Ford is leading the race by more that $20,000 and with his talent, it's doubtful anyone will catch him.

But if anyone has the ability to overcome steep odds, it's Young.

"This is been a might testy year and I seem to be coming out of it okay," Young proclaimed. "Things just aren't clicking like they were last year. Maybe it's because I got spoiled over my success in 1980.

"But success means very little to me without the world to go along with it. I want the world," Young said. "And I'm going to get it."

Orioles snap Denny's zero streak

By United Press International

John Denny is finished counting.

The Cleveland Indians' right-hander entered Thursday night's game against Baltimore with three consecutive shutouts. After seven innings, Denny had improved his scoreless inning streak to 34 and held a 3-0 lead.

However, with two out in the eighth, Ken Singleton broke that streak with an RBI single before the Indians went on to post a 4-1 triumph over the Orioles.

Denny, 8-4, was immediately lifted and Dan Spillner finished up for his fifth save as the pitchers combined on a six-hitter.

Denny, who struck out a career-high 10 batters, was attempting to become the first Indian pitcher since Luis Tiant in 1968 to pitch four straight shutouts.

The Indians scored single runs off Baltimore starter Sammy Stewart, 3-6, in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings. Jorge Orta opened the fourth inning with a single, went to third on Mike Hargrove's single and scored on Toby Harrah's sacrifice fly. In the sixth, Rick Manning doubled, took third on Orta's fly ball and scored on Hargrove's sacrifice fly.

American League

Toronto 2, Seattle 0

At Toronto, Jesse Barfield belted a solo home run to back the combined six-hit pitching of Luis Leal and Joey McLaughlin to pace Toronto. Leal, who was removed after seven innings because of a pulled stomach muscle, scattered five hits, striking out five and walking two to earn his sixth triumph against 10 losses. McLaughlin finished up to register his sixth save. Ken Clay, 0-6, took the loss.

Chicago 12, Milwaukee 6

At Milwaukee, the White Sox capitalized on four Milwaukee errors in a critical four-run seventh inning. Ron LeFlore triggered the big inning with a walk. After 13 pickoff attempts by pitcher Reggie Cleveland, LeFlore stole second. For Chicago, Greg Luzinski went 4-for-4 and Bill Almon had four RBI and Wayne Nordhagen three. Winner Lamarr Hoyt, 7-3, pitched four innings of hitless relief. Cleveland, 2-3, took the loss.

Hailey's 'journalist with a brush' tries to capture traditions of the Old West

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The heavily bearded man kneels among the sagebrush and stares intently at his target, aiming his weapon steadily.

But of course he's steady: it's only a picture. Yet you feel that if the man came to life, he would continue to remain stock-still in his hunter's attitude.

Everything about this man — the fringed buckskin suit he wears, the coonskin hat adorning his head, the powder horn and sheathed knife hanging at his side — recalls yesterday's Westerner, the type of man most of us know about only through Davy Crockett tales and related folktore.

This is the scene artist Ralph Harris depicts on the muzzle loader stamp which recently won first prize in a contest held by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

It is an engaging scene, but not as interesting as its creator, a man deeply fond of old Western life and acutely aware of its disappearance.

"Basically, I'm a journalist, just like you are, instead I do it with a brush instead of a pen," Harris told an interviewer. "I record things of interest today, and being an Idaho artist, I want to show things that we're losing."

The 41-year-old cited the rising costs of rodeo equipment and travel, steep inheritance taxes and rising property values as helping to diminish "the openness of Western life very fast."

In the clothing industry, however, the Western look is enjoying a renaissance of sorts, due to the recent "Urban Cowboy" phenomenon. "That pleases the hell out of me," Harris said.

Harris' interest in art began, predictably enough, at an early age. "I just liked to look at beautiful paintings. I was more interested in trying to create things as I saw them," he said.

He honed his talents during two years at Idaho State University, four years at the Art Center School in Los Angeles and for two more years at California's Long Beach State University.

The same kind of discipline was necessary for creating the prize-winning stamp.

"Doing something for a stamp design requires a great deal of detail," Harris said. "You have to have good photo materials to work from. You have to start with a certain concept in mind, a certain feeling you want to project for the stamp."

The Fish and Game Department obviously thought Harris captured the right feeling. The letter the department sent him confirming his award said his painting, titled "On the Hunt," best depicts the bold, energetic spirit of today's and the original muzzle loader hunter."

A muzzle loader shoot held last spring at Stanton Crossing enabled Harris to capture the proper spirit.

"That's quite a revival coming through these days, people interested in restoring Western tradition," Harris said.

One such person was the model for the stamp, Richard Baker of Downey, whom Harris photographed several times during the shoot.

"He (Baker) represents all of the folklore and accouterments to be found on any historic revivalist, and spends a great percentage of his time acting the part," Harris said.

Harris actually doesn't spend a great percentage of his time painting Western settings. During winters he teaches skiing at Sun Valley. He has done graphic design work, technical illustrations for Ski Magazine and assignments for the U.S. Air Force, whose historical staff he serves on.

"It expands my range and my knowledge of art and how things fit together," Harris said, explaining the benefits of painting different subjects. "Everything requires a certain type of discipline. It adds to my full understanding of what art really is.

"Working with different clients, you have to take on the character of the client so the art fits his needs."

In a way, Harris acquired the hunter's character to do the muzzle loader painting, even though he hasn't gone hunting since the late 60s.

Pointing to a photograph of a bighorn sheep, Harris said proudly, "I do most of my hunting with my camera now. These are my trophies."

Conley: Court ruling may endanger fishing

OISE (UPI) — A decision by a U.S. district judge in Portland to allow Indians to fish for salmon on the lower Columbia River may have detrimental effects on Idaho's salmon and steelhead runs, Idaho Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley said Wednesday.

"We are very concerned about the effect this fishery will have on our fall chinook and our . . . steelhead," Conley said. "Spawning runs of these fish peak at Bonneville Dam sometime around Sept. 5-15, and we're afraid that runs of these two fish, which are already low, will be further reduced by this fishing activity."

U.S. District Judge Walter Craig's decision allowed Indians to fish from noon on Sept. 1 to noon on Sept. 3, he said. He said about 5,600 adult salmon, 3,000 immature male salmon and 1,800 steelhead were caught during the two days.

The second season allowed under Craig's order began at noon on Sept. 7 and will extend until noon today, he said. A third season also will be held if the Indians approve it, he said. Craig said Indian experts could decide if sufficient salmon were available to allow fishing during the final period, which would open at noon Monday and close at noon Wednesday.

"This Columbia River fishery is simply an added pressure on a fish that can't stand added pressure at this time," Conley said, noting that the Idaho Fish and Game Commission is allowing only catch-and-release fishing in the state's Clearwater River system, where most of the migrating steelhead spawn.

The fall chinook salmon, which spawn in the Snake River below Hells Canyon Dam, also are at low numbers, he said.

"We are extremely concerned when management of this delicate resource is taken out of the hands of the biologists and placed in the courts," he said. "Our goal is to place the needs of the resource above the needs of any user group or other entity.

"After all, if we end up with so few fish that nobody can fish, we will all have lost something special."

Idaho F&G ups limits following large return

BOISE — Fall steelhead fishing opens on the Salmon River Sept. 19 — about two weeks earlier than usual — with bag and possession limits more liberal than last year.

The Fish and Game Commission, during its special meeting in Pocatello earlier this month, also approved a sport fishery for part of the Snake River between Lewiston and Hells Canyon Dam.

On the Clearwater River, however, fishing will be restricted to catch-and-release only because of extremely low numbers of steelhead in this year's upstream return of group 'B' fish.

The Salmon River season runs through Dec. 31. From the mouth of the Salmon upstream to the mouth of the Middle Fork Salmon, the daily bag and possession limit is two, with a season limit of eight steelhead.

From the mouth of the Middle Fork upstream to the mouth of the East Fork Salmon, regulations allow a daily bag limit of two, a possession limit of four and an eight-fish season limit.

The Snake River season is Sept. 19 through Oct. 15 from the Lewiston-Clarkston bridge upstream to Three-Mile Inn on the Washington shore.

From Three-Mile Inn upstream to 400 feet below Hells Canyon Dam, the season runs from Sept. 19 through Dec. 31.

Closures will be in effect within those stretches of the Snake from the Anatone gauge station up to Lime Point and from the mouth of the Salmon up to Dug Bar to protect steelhead migrating up the Grand Ronde and Imnaha rivers on the Oregon side.

The bag possession and season limits are one, two and three from the Lewiston-Clarkston bridge to the mouth of the Salmon and two, two and eight steelhead from Dug Bar to 400 feet below Hells Canyon Dam.

Closures to all fishing are specified for the shoreline along the perimeter of Dworshak National Fish Hatchery on the Clearwater. In open areas, all fish must be released immediately and only single, barbless hooks on artificial flies or lures are allowed.

John Coon, anadromous fishery manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said the count of 'A' fish at Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River totaled more than 120,000 this year compared to 85,400 in 1980.

"Group A fish are those that return to the Salmon River and the increased numbers in the run allow a longer season and more liberal limits," Coon said.

Variations in limits on the Salmon, Coon explained, are designed to encourage fishing for what are predominantly hatchery steelhead above the mouth of the Middle Fork and reduce pressure on wild stocks that return to the Middle Fork.

"We urge anglers to release any wild steelhead taken from the Salmon. Catches will be closely monitored and restrictions will be ordered if we see too many wild steelhead taken and kept," Coon said.

Catch-and-release practice growing as streams, rivers produce less

By LEFTY KREH
© 1981 The Baltimore Sun

You don't burn your golf balls at the end of the day and more fishermen are realizing that if they want to continue to enjoy their sport, they must release most of the fish they catch.

Any honest angler will tell you that if he's fishing for food, he's going to loose money.

Combine the cost of the tackle, lures, bait and travel — and the extras that go with a fishing trip — and the cost of fish kept to east is astounding.

As more people take up fishing, and as less streams and rivers produce a limited number of fish, we must learn to carefully land and release most of them we catch. And if we continue to keep the biggest trout, bass or other species and return the smaller ones, we are keeping trophy fish, leaving smaller fish with gene pools that will produce more smaller fish.

My personal view is to release all fish that I feel will survive, although I understand why people keep some fish to eat. But trophies should always be put back, so they can produce more of the same. And, I like the challenge of knowing that a big fish has been returned that some of us can again try to catch.

If you agree that releasing most of your fish is a good idea, then it's important to put them back in the best possible condition. Here are some guidelines to ensure that released fish do survive:

• First, fight your fish on leaders or lines heavy enough so that you can land them in a reasonable amount of time. Don't use unduly heavy lines that take the fun and sport out of it, but lines too fragile require that you spend undue amounts of time fighting the fish into total exhaustion and it's chances of living after being freed are in doubt.

• Plan during the battle where you can best land the fish. Don't drag it up on a gravel or mud bar where silt and debris can get in its gills and choke it. A gravel beach or a quiet backwater area is an ideal spot.

• Fish that you plan to release should never be gaffed — enough said. Also, the gills are very sensitive and should not be handled or damaged.

• Landing nets should be used when possible. This allows you to carefully lift the fish from the water before it gets too tired. Always lead a fish into landing net head-first. If you come in behind and touch the tail, the fish flees and continues to fight, prolonging the fight and increasing its exhaustion.

• Handle any fish as little as possible. There is a slick coating on all fish to cut down on friction when swimming. If that coating is rubbed off, infection can occur. To release smaller fish, you can grab the line or leader just above the hook to control the fish. Then with either needle nose pliers or hemostats (rustproof and with locking jaws, available in surgical supply houses) you can grip the hook, flip the wrist and the fish is free.

After Labor Day thoughts:

With everything now-a-days having an economic value, why not fishing and hunting and all outdoor activities?

In order to convince politicians that the outdoors is something other than a place to be exploited, the people that use the outdoors for pure pleasure should put an economic value on their activities. For instance: Region 4 of the Forest Service is using a value of $23.10 per day for big game hunting, $24 a day for upland bird, $26.80 for small game and $17.85 for fishing.

In Targhee National Forest that would mean the forest is worth $4 million a year for wildlife. By comparison, timber and wood cutting are worth $2 million and grazing $1.5 million.

With these figures in mind, what politician would vote against recreation interests? I think the people who give us these figures are low. Have any of them looked at the catalogs for private hunting or fishing? These private clubs charge more than 10 times the amount for hunting and fishing than the figures I've listed.

Thanks for the aluminum can

One of the best blessings us outdoor types have is . . . the aluminum can.

For years I was upset about how we treat our recreation areas. Now I find it is cleaning itself up. By placing a worth on aluminum cans, we have an automatic clean-up detail. I noticed this on the trail to the Boulder Chain Lakes in the White Cloud area. I used to bring more out than I took it and I was strapped to find a stray wrapper. Bless the aluminum can.

Challis dump yields 'treasures'

On thing that will detour me from fishing is an old dump. One such dump in the Challis area got me excited. I found beer cans in good condition. Triumph and Carling Black Label were the brands. Hey, that gets me excited. How about a Dial tobacco can in good condition?

Reservoir conditions vary

My thoughts on the reservoir conditions this fall. Magic Reservoir should have enough water to carry over the fish population. Fish Creek Reservoir is just a mud hole and will have to be planted to have any fish at all. Mackay Reservoir has about 20 acres of fishable water left on Labor Day. Salmon Reservoir can't be emptied, so it should be excellent fishing all winter.

Roseworth Reservoir should be forgotten about. It will be dry as a bone until spring runoffs. Many of our creeks are almost bone-dry also. I did notice that the Salmon River had a good flow of water and the fly fishing was excellent for six- to 10-inch natives.

'Golden trout' are mutations

I received a call asking about "golden trout" in the Snake River in Hagerman Valley. Yes, I too have caught some "goldens" lately in the river. They are not "Golden" trout. Rather they are a mutation of our rainbow trout.

Why the dramatic increase in numbers of these mutations? I suspect our trout industry should give us an answer.

Outdoor groups worth joining

Magic Valley Fly Fishers will meet at the Boy Scouts building on Falls Avenue at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 17. A movie on fly fishing for Atlantic salmon will be shown.

The Twin Falls Fish & Wildlife Conservation Corporation meets every second Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the CSI fish hatchery on Rock Creek. They too have informative programs. If you love your outdoor activity — get involved. Join a group.

Bowmen lend help in prairie, but another kills prize lamb

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Magic Valley archers have performed a service for the Idaho Fish and Game Department but another did his brotherhood of bowmen no good at all.

Heading into the second week of the archery season, archers appear to have taken care of the predation problems on the Camas prairie and enjoyed the "usual" six percent success on deer in the Cassia Division.

But the season was only a few hours old when someone used a Suffolk ram, owned by Pete Cenarusa, for target practice near Carey. The buck, left skewered by an aluminum, broad-point tipped arrow, had to be destroyed.

Don Green, Carey, Blaine County deputy sheriff, said the circumstances indicated the shooting of the ram was malicious.

"I'm sure that's what it amounted to," he said.

Green said the ram, along with several others owned by Cenarusa, was being pastured four miles east of Carey on U.S. Highway 93, near the Fish Creek turnoff.

"This buck evidently had gotten out and was grazing along the road," Green said. "Someone just used him for target practice."

He said the arrow penetrated to the fletching with the razor-edged big game tip sticking out the other side. Green said he didn't know how long the animal suffered before it was put out of its misery.

Green continued the investigation by checking out several hunting camps up the Fish Creek canyon but couldn't find any "matchups" for the arrow or anyone who had witnessed the malicious act.

"It appears that whoever it was got away with it because the arrow is just standard production," Green said.

The arrow and the matter have been turned over to Ted Chu, conservation officers for the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

The enforcement officers noted that the bowman earned himself a lot of enemies among his peers. Green said those hunters talked to in hunting camps after the ram was found had expressed outrage that some individual would cast a pall of that sort over the entire sport.

On a happier note, Gary Will, regional biologist, said archers have helped themselves and Camas prairie landowners through special elk and antelope hunts.

The elk, survivors of a band transplanted from the Warm Springs area near Ketchum into the willow patches on Magic Reservoir backwaters some 20 years ago, have become a problem for grain growers. The herd has knocked down more than it has eaten and been an especially expensive guest along the base of Johnson Hill and the Fir Grove Ranch areas.

The department tried a brief five-day rifle hunt to no real effect, the hunters moving in quickly for the kill and then leaving. The elk returned to the fields in a short while.

Since the statewide archery success is usually four to six percent, the department used the idea of bowmen over a longer period of time to harass the animals off private lands.

The season opened Aug. 1 and runs through Sept. 27 for bulls only.

"We know of at least three bulls taken although there probably are more," said Will. "Based on what the officers have told us, the hunt was fairly effective in keeping the animals away from crops during the key period."

Will added that since the herd can easily accommodate a minimum harvest figure and since the hunt apparently was coming close to accomplishing its goal, it probably will be continued in the future.

Similarly, archers took "several" antelope, according to Will.

"This is a small herd of about 125 right on the prairie which we really don't consider to be antelope habitat," Will said. "We had several complaints about antelope predation and met with landowners a couple of years ago to try to straighten it out. As a result, our five-year management plan is to maintain that herd at about 100 animals...(and) landowners pretty much agreed to that figure."

From a general archery opening standpoint, Will said the department didn't have a very clear picture.

He said from reports heard from conservation officers that pressure was about as great as usual.

Through Saturday and Sunday, Nellis checked out 345 archers with 21 deer — a six-percent success figure that nearly always pops up.

Will said he spent the weekend traveling the unit and interviewing hunters.

"There isn't a green blade of grass up there and all the roads are covered with about two inches of fine dust," Will said. "Its tinder dry."

He added "hunters were seeing large numbers of deer . . . 10 to 25 per day. Almost everyone was getting shots."

When it's not possible to remove the hook from the fish while it is still in the water, often you can lift the fish into the boat or on the bank in a net. Use the net meshes to grasp the fish securely and remove the hook. Trying to hold a slippery fish with your hands often forces you to grip it so tightly as to damage some of its vital organs.

Some fish can be held immobile by gripping them in a special manner. Holding a fish by the lower lip with the thumb and first finger will make a bass, bluegill and crappie lie motionless while you take out the hook.

Other species can be gripped across the head and they will remain relatively inactive. Bluefish (which have sharp teeth) rockfish, smaller channel bass and pickerel are some that this treatment works well with. Never grasp a pike or pickerel in the eyeballs if you don't want to blind it.

• Make sure the fish is really revived before you turn it loose. If the teeth won't hurt you, grasp your thumb inside the fish's mouth and your first finger under the lower lip, grabbing the tail securely in the other hand. Now swish the fish vigorously back and forth. This forces oxygenated water through the gills and quickly revives most fish.

If the hook is buried deeply in the throat it's best to cut the leader off. Stomach acids usually will break down the hook and fish has a better chance to survive than if you pulled it fre.

• Before the fish is released take pictures of it. They make the angler feel good, and they last longer. You will also have the reminded that a good fish you caught is aavilable to others.

Former New Mexico cager shot to death

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Gabe Nava, former University of New Mexico basketball player and member of the Mexican Olympic team, died Thursday from multiple bullet wounds inflicted by a bandit.

Nava, 30, who was administrator of the Albuquerque Country Club, was shot and wounded by a gunman who robbed him and tried to rape his woman companion in an early morning incident behind a local bar, police said.

John's son released from hospital

NEW YORK (UPI) — Travis John, the son of New York Yankee pitching ace Tommy John, was released Thursday from New York University Medical Center, one month after a fall from the third story of a beach home critically injured the boy.

During his recovery, the boy received more than 1,500 get-well cards, including messages from Cardinal Terence Cooke, Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson, President Reagan and former presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon.

Musical coaches to record country songs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Kentucky's Joe B. Hall, Indiana's Bobby Knight and former Marquette Coach Al McGuire will dribble into Nashville Monday but it won't be for a basketball clinic. The trio is cutting a record album.

Coaches are known for singing the blues, but this trio will cut a Country-Western album instead at the Soundshop Recording Studios, under the coaching of Hendersonville record producer Gene Large.

"Basically, it's going to be Coach Joe B.'s album," Large said. "McGuire and Knight will be doing duets with him.

"We'll be doing standards — songs like 'Elvira,' 'On The Road Again,' 'Good Ole Boys,' and 'The Gambler,'" he added.

"Joe B.'s wife is also going to vocalize with him a little on 'We Love Each Other.'"

Weaver may retire if his bank book is fat

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Earl Weaver, the winningest active manager in major league baseball, says he will look at his financial situation before next season's All-Star break and decide whether to retire.

Right now, the 51-year-old Weaver says the odds are "70-30" that he will hang up his manager's cap for good.

Weaver's talk about retiring is nothing new. Also not new is Orioles' owner Edward Bennett Williams' desire to have Weaver remain as manager as long as he owns the team.

But, Weaver said Wednesday, "At this point, I'd say the odds are 70-30 in favor of my retiring after next season. I'll see what the safe deposit looks like and then make up my mind."

Weaver's winning percentage is the best among active major league managers and second-best ever. Since he took over the Orioles in 1968, the the team has won six American League Eastern Division championships, four American League pennants and one world championship.

Blue Jays sign vagabond hurler Espinosa

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Blue Jays announced Thursday the signing of free agent pitcher Nino Espinosa, a six-year veteran of the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies.

Espinosa, a 28-year-old right hander, was released by the Phillies Aug. 31 after compiling a 2-5 record and 6.08 ERA in 14 games this season. He completed two of his 14 starts, for a total of 73.2 innings in which he allowed 98 hits and 52 runs. He walked 24 and struck out 22.

Before joining Philadelphia in the 1979 season, Espinosa had let the Mets pitching staff in wins for two consecutive seasons. He was 10-13 with a 3.42 ERA in 1977 and 11-15 with a 4.72 ERA in 1978.

During his 1979 season with the Phillies, Espinosa compiled a 14-12 record and a 3.65 ERA. He missed most of 1980 with tendonitis and bursitis in his shoulder.

White Sox recapture old teammate

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox Thursday purchased switch-hitting outfielder Jerry Hairston from the Mexico City Reds of the Mexican League.

Hairston, 29, played with the Sox from 1973 to 1977 and had a short stint with Pittsburgh before joining the Mexican League where he has been playing for four years.

Hairston batted .293, with seven home runs, 74 RBI and 32 stolen bases with Mexico City this season, leading the club to the league championship. He hit .345 in the playoffs and set a playoff RBI record with 17.

Gura fractures finger, will miss start

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Kansas City Royals pitcher Larry Gura suffered a hairline fracture of the little finger on his pitching hand in the Royals' game Wednesday night and will miss one turn in the rotation.

Gura, a left-hander, was injured in the fifth inning of Wednesday night's game against the California Angels when he knocked down a one-hopper hit by Rick Burleson. He was lifted from the game, which the Royals won 7-3.

Royals officials said Gura will miss one turn in the rotation because of the injury. He was scheduled to pitch Monday at California.

Reds exchange Bair for Cards' Fiala

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Thursday that right-handed pitcher Doug Bair was traded to the St. Louis Cardinals for second baseman Neil Fiala and a player to be named later.

Bair, 32, with a 2-2 record and 5.77 ERA in 24 relief appearances this year had been with the Reds for four years.

Fiala, 25, hit .323 this year for Springfield of the American Association. He has been used as a pinch hitter with St. Louis this season three times and is hitless.

49ers get running back from Chargers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers announced Thursday they have acquired running back Amos Lawrence from the San Diego Chargers for a draft choice.

Since Lawrence — North Carolina's all-time rusher — has not had any training this year, the 49ers have petitioned the NFL for a roster exemption so they don't have to place Lawrence on their 45-man list before Sunday's game against the Chicago Bears.

Lawrence was a fourth-round draft choice of the Chargers this year but decided to sit out the season after he couldn't come to terms on a contract with San Diego.

Heisman winner's father returns to jail

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — George Rogers Sr., father of New Orleans Saints running back and Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers Jr., lost his parole Thursday and was returned to jail to await action on new criminal charges.

The state Board of Pardons and Paroles revoked parole for the elder Rogers, freed last October after serving eight years for murder, because of a July 31 traffic accident in which a Lawrenceville man and his daughter were killed.

Board spokesman Silas Moore said Rogers was returned to the Gwinnett County Jail to await trial on two counts of vehicular homicide and driving under the influence of alcohol. No trial date was set, but court sources said it would likely be in early October.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because October 1, 1981 implementation is required by federal law. Failure to implement on October 1, 1981 would result in a loss of federal funds necessary to pay AFDC benefits to approximately 6,200 low-income families with children in Idaho. Benefits would be decreased or curtailed for many of those currently eligible and for those potentially eligible.

The rules to be adopted by emergency procedures are to become effective on the first day of October, 1981, and to expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the twenty-eigth day of January, 1982.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the proposed emergency action and of the principal issues involved:

Proposed for adoption, amendment, repeal and/or renumbering, the rules governing the provisions of the AFDC program relating to: Earned income disregards; Earnings of children; Resource exclusions; Income limit for AFDC eligibility; Treatment of retroactive statutory income; Treatment of step-parent income and entitlement of spouse and step-children; Eligibility and entitlement of participants in strikes; Age limit for dependent children; Limitation on AFDC pregnant women; Criteria for exemptions from work requirements; Notice requirements; Prohibition of aid less than ten dollars ($10.00); Adjustment for incorrect payments; Treatment of windfalls; and Supplemental payments.

Any person can review the proposed emergency rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section, or in any of the Regional Administrative Offices of the Department located in Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Caldwell, Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls, or in the Offices of the Attorney General, Health and Welfare Division, located in Coeur d'Alene, Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho Falls. Copies of the proposed emergency rules will be made available upon request.

Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed emergency rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed emergency rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. All written comments and data concerning the proposed emergency rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered no later than September 16, 1981.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

South won the diamond lead in dummy and led the seven of trumps. East showed out and prospects of making four hearts were dim indeed. The only legitimate play would be to drop a doubleton king-queen of spades. South didn't like that chance and instead decided to keep dummy's ace of clubs as a threat card, rather than use it to discard a potential spade loser.

West ducked the first trump, but South continued. West won and led his second and last diamond. South won in dummy and ruffed a diamond on which card West chucked his deuce of clubs. Another trump went to West's ace and West led his last trump back. Now South cashed his next to last trump to come down to a five-card ending. Dummy's last five cards were a spade, a diamond and three clubs.

On that next to last trump West felt that he had to keep three clubs and chucked a spade. East, who had already jettisoned four clubs, also discarded a spade to hang on to his high diamond.

Now South simply played ace and deuce of spades to set up his jack and four as winners.

His failure to take a discard on the ace of clubs had paid off. Either East or West should have seen what was going on, but when you give a man a chance to make a mistake he may oblige.

Hollywood creating more 'Dallas' copycats

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — "Falcon Crest" is the title of a prime time weekly dramatic series which makes its debut this fall joining a plethora of soap opera-like shows that hold a shattered mirror to real life.

"Dallas," the first and most popular of the current crop of nighttime dramas, has stimulated the copycat syndrome in Hollywood's TV factories, which had abandoned p.m. soap operas after "Peyton Place" died years ago.

"Dynasty," "Flamingo Road" and "Knott's Landing" are continuing sagas of families, extended families and neighbors, that challenge Harold Robbins for kinky plot twists and rampant sexual didoes.

If the average American family committed as many infidelities and felonies or suffered as many accidents and exotic diseases, lawyers and doctors would rule the world.

The contents of these squalid nighttime potboilers could encourage Soviet bloc nations to screen the lot of them as a massive indictment of the captalist system, Christianity and Western morality.

Jane Wyman, former wife of President Ronald Reagan - and probably not too pleased with the fact that she will forevermore be identified as such — is the star of the new family saga, "Falcon Crest."

She portrays a matriarch in Napa, Calif., owner of an entire valley which includes vineyards as far as the eye can see and a prospering winery.

Miss Wyman is keeping a low profile and has eschewed facing the press until after "Falcon Crest" makes its debut in October.

Miss Dalton, a veteran of such other series as "Hennesey," "The Jonathan Winters Show" and "The Joey Bishop Show," is less self-conscious about discussing the new series.

Her first and most important consideration about "Falcon Crest" is that it is being written and produced by Earl Hamner, the self-sang guiet Virginia gentleman who produced "The Waltons" for the past decade or so.

Hamner has established himself as a decorous man of infinite taste and sensitivity who religiously depicted the depression era farm family — based on his own family — in honest terms.

"I think Earl will do the same thing with 'Falcon Crest,'" Abby said.

"I go back a few years with Earl. I was originally tested for the role of Olivia Walton. I was one of the final three actresses considered for the part. He wrote a couple of guest shots for me in the show, too. Earl was instrumental in casting me as Julia Channing in the new series.

"Julia has been skipped over as an heir to the vineyards and the winery. She wants to make sure that her son (played by Lamass) doesn't lose out. She's a very strong and determined woman.

"I've had the first script for only a few days, so none of us is sure where the stories and characters will be going. I do know that there are two branches of the central family, and there will be many conflicts."

Abby hasn't attempted to analyze the success of nighttime soap operas and, for that matter, hasn't watched many of them except "Dallas."

"I like 'Dallas' because I love Larry Hagman as J.R. Ewing," she said. "He's so rotten. The cast is excellent and the characters charming and interesting.

"I think Earl will write our characters with as much care and attention to detail.

"Earl doesn't want a lot of bed-hopping in 'Falcon Crest.' He hopes to achieve a Lillian Hellman-type study of people, their relationships with one another and the emotional and psychological undercurrents that motivate them.

"He's right. The novelty of bed-hopping has worn off on television. This show should be different than the other continuing stories on the air because it will be more sophisticated and done in good taste."

She and businessman-husband Jack Smith are the parents of three teenage children. Family pressures forced Abby to abandon her traveling theatrical career.

"It got so it was physically impossible for me to pack another suitcase," she said. "I need to work to express myself. But you can only take so much. Six weeks in Buffalo or Lubbock can seem like a life sentence instead of a way of life.

"A long-running television series is the perfect answer for me now. With luck, 'Falcon Crest,' with Earl Hamner running things, is just what I've been looking for."
